LOVE CASE DECISION RESERVED

Decision was reserved by Judge Pierce in the double divorce suit of Mrs. Virginia Aldridge Love and her husband, Henry Hovey Love, formerly a State street broker. Each is seeking divorce, the husband on the ground that the wife drank to excess and she on the allegation that he has been unfaithful. Arguments by the opposing counsel were finished to-day. Mrs. Love sat in the court room and heard them. Her husband was absent. So was Miss Marie Ross, the pretty young woman named by the wife in her suit.

Chester W. Ford, counsel for Mr. Love, defended the character of Miss Ross in his plea.

"Can your honor imagine," the lawyer asked, "that a man would stoop so low as to allow his sister to unsconduct herself with a married man while he was in the same house or on the same boat with that sister? All evidence shows that Mr. Ross was always present when his sister was in Mr. Love's company. The opposite of it all, both on the trip to New York and at No. 90 Corey road, Brookline, makes it highly improbable.

Rabbi With the Party.

"On the trip to New York Rabbi Fleischer was with the party. Mr. Ross was on the boat on the return trip. I don't believe that little girl would face the publicity she knew would come by defending herself unless she knew she was innocent. It is for your honor whether that girl's future is blasted.

"The Loves would be living together today but for Mrs. Love's drinking proclivities. She started drinking twenty years ago and she hasn't left off. I believe that Mr. Love's charges of gross and confirmed habits of inebriation are sustained.

Frank E. Bradbury, counsel for Mrs. Love, defended his client and said that the evidence showed plainly she was not a drunkard.

"Mr. Love's testimony," the lawyer declared, "stamped him a liar. If ever a man's testimony was fabrication, that man betrayed it on the witness stand. I am not here to defend the girls' ethics of Miss Ross's brother, but I do say that the evidence leads to the inevitable conclusion that the acts which we charge happened."

"Mr. Love makes the absurd statement that he bought $65 worth of furniture for entertaining Miss Ross and her brother at Corey road for two nights. If he had an improper motive, why didn't he put them up at less cost at a hotel or lodging house?"

Two Arrests in Case.

Two men are to-day under arrest charged with having tried to sell to Love's lawyer "information" that would be serviceable to his suit, and with intimating that such information would be appreciated by the other side in the suit. The price specified is said to have been $1,400. It is declared that a similar proposition was made by other parties to Mrs. Love's attorneys.

The accused men, who are declared to have been overheard by two police inspectors while trying to slicker with E. H. Schwarzenburg, Mr. Love's attorney, are Charles A. Hancock, a broker at No. 60 State street, and George C. Orr, also a broker, of Rochester, N. H.

They were arraigned before Judge Parmenter to-day, and on the request of the police were held for continued hearing on November 11. Bail was fixed at $1,000 each.

According to the police Hancock, who lives at No. 123 Fuller street, Brookline, saw Schwarzenburg in his office and talked with him and his partner, Chester W. Ford, concerning evidence in the possession of Orr, who conducts a brokerage office of Hancock's brokerage business in Rochester.

Worth $1,400.

It is alleged that Hancock said the information was worth $1,400 to Orr, and that if Love did not care to buy it at that price, his wife might. Later an appointment was made and Inspectors Wolf and Loughlin were detailed to overhear what conversation might occur.

Adjoining rooms were engaged at the Copley Square Hotel for the conference. The two rooms, both of which opened on one corridor, are connected by an open door, above which is a transom. When Schwarzenburg and Hancock and Orr entered one of the rooms, the transom between the two rooms was slightly ajar.

Although the lawyer attempted to draw them out, they refused to talk very freely, and finally one of them noted that the transom was open a little. It was closed tight, but inspectors Wolf and Loughlin say they heard nearly all that was said, even those

DRAPER VOTES IN HOPEDALE

HOPEDALE, Nov. 8.—Governor Eben S. Draper cast his ballot here at 10:45 a. m. He arrived from Boston in his automobile a few minutes before voting and was accompanied only by his chauffeur. He was greeted at the polling booth by many friends and neighbors. He appeared to be very cheerful, and if his smile was an index of his thoughts, very confident. He spoke or nodded to acquaintances, and cast his vote without ostentation. After voting he went to his Hopedale home, which is on Aden street.

When Governor Draper was asked to express his expectations as to the result of the election, he replied:

"All I have to say on that subject was printed in this morning's Boston newspapers. I have not anything to add to that."

EXTRA! TILLINGHAST AIRSHIP IS SIGHTED

WORCESTER, Nov. 8.—The Wallace E. Tillinghast airship is a fact. Mayor James Logan has seen it—the airship, not the fact. The Mayor is authority for the statement that he has beheld the Tillinghast flying machine with his own eyes. He saw it on invitation of Mr. Tillinghast. When he saw it the Mayor won't tell. That is a secret. "There is such a machine," says His Honor, "and it looks good. I did not see it fly. But I did see the machine, the motor and all that." The statement of the Mayor is of interest on account of the elusive character of Tillinghast's machine, which has been heard, but not seen so far.

LEG BROKEN, MAN CRAWLS TO SAFETY

With his leg broken and his body covered with bruises, John Kelly, a laborer, 31 years old, of No. 362 Walnut street, Newton Highlands, dragged himself across the New York Central railroad's tracks at Newtonville, crept up the steep embankment down which he had fallen, climbed over the boundary fence and fell exhausted on the sidewalk. Half an hour afterward he was found by a policeman and hurried to the Newton Hospital, where it is said that he will recover. Kelly had taken a fall of twenty-five feet, landing on the tracks.

RACE CLASH FEARED AT OKLAHOMA POLLS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 8.—Interest in the actions of the negroes in Oklahoma overshadowed that in the election of State and congressional officers, the negroes threatening to vote in spite of the "grandfather clause," and in many places arming to use force to get what they consider their rights. At Muskogee, Saipulpa and several other places the negroes have been secretly buying arms and ammunition, but the white men are prepared to suppress any outbreaks.

BYRNES PROMISES NEW VERMONT LINE

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Nov. 8.—Vice-President Thomas Byrnes of the Boston & Maine Railroad came to Brattleboro by special train and at a meeting of about two hundred citizens in Festival Hall said that the railroad intended to construct a line from South Vernon to Brattleboro as soon as it could get authority to do so from the Vermont Legislature, and when he arose to make the announcement was greeted with applause, as it was an authoritative statement.

AGAIN CHANGES DATE OF OVER-SEA FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the aviator, has advanced the date of his over-sea flight in an aeroplane from the deck of a vessel to next Saturday, instead of November 15, to which he had postponed the attempt. He will try to make his start from the Hamburg-American liner Pennsylvania when she is fifty miles out at sea, and will head for Governor's Island.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers in Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

LUMBER VESSELS ASHORE

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 8.—Two lumber schooner ran ashore on Island rocks in Portsmouth Harbor in the darkness early to-day.

The George H. Collier of Machias, running from Machias to Boston, struck Gerrish Island for Fishing Island and, driven by a stiff south-west gale, was driven upon Gerrish Island. Captain Mitchell and his crew of five men feared that their vessel would float off at next high tide.

The life-saving crew from Wood Island station put out to the Collier and found that the men aboard were in no immediate danger.

Hereby had the life-savers got to the Collier when they were recalled to the station and sent to Duck Rock, Isle of Shoals, where the British lumber-ship Hattie Muriel from St. Johns, had run on to the rocks with captain and crew of five men aboard. The Muriel got off her course and was caught on the south-east point of Duck Island's ledge.

The life-saving crew had a rough row over there. Two huge seas came out from Portsmouth water front at the same time. They stood by the Muriel until the schooner should pound on the ledge and start to break up.

PUPILS STRIKE FOR ELECTION HOLIDAY

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The police were called to-day to quell a riot caused by high school boys who were on strike because the school authorities did not designate election day a holiday. Principal Cox of the high school was roughly handled by the pupils when he came out of the building in an effort to still their rebellious demonstration. He was turned back through the doors which the boys then locked from the outside. He was held a prisoner until a squad of police released him. The striking pupils later paraded the streets giving their school yells.

BRUSSELS RIOTOUS AS PARLIAMENT OPENS

BRUSSELS, Nov. 8.—With the hall surrounded by soldiers and mobs of Socialists clamoring in the streets and attempting to storm the cordon of troops and break into the building, the Belgian Parliament was formally opened to-day by King Albert. The royal procession to Parliament hall was guarded by lines of soldiers, who held back the noisy crowds of Socialists. An attempt was made to mercenade King Albert to delegate the opening of the body to some one else for fear of assassination, but he refused. The Socialists demand a dissolution of the Parliament.

LEOMINSTER CLERK FLIES IN GLIDER

LEOMINSTER, Nov. 8.—The first flight ever made in Leominster in a heavier than air machine, but working successfully was made by Forrest Freeman, who works in a Lawrence dry goods store. Freeman, on his glider, made flight after flight, going from 300 to 400 yards each time from the top of a long sloping field. When he made his first flight, Freeman wrenched his right arm severely in landing.

TENNESSEE FUSION MEN ARE CONFIDENT

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 8.—Ideal Fall weather brought out early a great country vote. In Western districts the Fusion ticket is strongest. Captain Gustin T. Hitchings, leader of the Fusion party in the State, said to-day that Captain Edward Hooper, Republican of Newport, would be elected Governor by 25,000 majority, and predicted the next Legislature would be controlled by Fusionists.

HELD ON ATTEMPT TO WRECK LYNN BOILER

LYNN, Nov. 8.—Herbert A. Barker, twenty-five, was to-day held in $500 for the grand jury on a charge of attempting to blow up the boiler in the works of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company, 37 Boston street, where fifteen persons are employed. Engineer Frank S. Page testified in the police court that when he started to get up steam to-day he found the safety valve of the boiler clogged. The police say that Barker, who was Page's fireman, plugged the pipe because he had been discharged.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper in Boston and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and over 75,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

SEES LANDSLIDE IN LYNN.

LYNN, Nov. 8.—Michael H. Cotter, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, to-day predicted a Democratic landslide in this city.

STRIKE THREAT IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 8.—Five thousand union conductors and motormen served notice on the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company to-day that if an agreement in their negotiations were not reached this afternoon a strike would be ordered.

HITCHCOCK HOME TO CAST HIS VOTE

Postmaster-General Frank H. Hitchcock came from Washington to-day to vote in his home city, West Newton. He visited Postmaster Mansfield in the Federal Building, but refused to discuss the election with the reporters there. Mr. Hitchcock said that postal savings banks would be established in one town in each State and territory not later than January 1. If these are successful, the number will be increased as fast as Congress makes additional appropriations, he said.

GLASS TRUST FACES CRIMINAL ACTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Steps to press its criminal action against the Imperial Window Glass Company, known as the "Glass Trust," are being taken by the Department of Justice now that the examiners of the officials and directors indicted under the anti-trust law have been overruled. The case is called for trial at Pittsburg on November 9.

SCHOONER ON FIRE IN BRIDGEPORT HARBOR

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Nov. 8.—A schooner caught fire in the harbor to-day. Boats were sent to her assistance.

REVERE BALLOTS SHOW FOSS, 210; DRAPER, 145

The first real indication of the result of the election in Massachusetts came from Revere to-day, when 360 ballots cast in Precinct 1, which is the Beachmont section, were counted with this result:

Foss, 210.

Draper, 145.

The other forty-five ballots were cast for Socialist, Socialist-Labor or blank. If this percentage of gain is maintained in the whole town of Revere, Foss comes it by a plurality of 333, as against a plurality for Vahey last year of 207.

EARELY RETURNS INDICATED TIDAL WAVE.

There were 1,937 votes cast in Revere last year, Vahey getting 1,042 and Draper 805.

The indications were this afternoon that there would be a tidal wave vote, not only in Boston, but throughout the State. Leaders in both parties counted this as being favorable to them. One thing seemed certain—that Massachusetts was going to the importance of this election as it has not been for many years.

The Foss people claimed that the big cost of living had more to do with the stirring up of the voters than anything else, and that it would help Foss rather than Draper.

Congressman Foss, who voted early at his home in Jamaica Plain, declared he felt confident of winning over Governor Draper by from 50,000 to 55,000 plurality.

Governor Draper voted at Hopedale. The Republicans, while admitting a slump in their vote, declared Draper would be re-elected by a safe margin.

Challenges in Ward 8.

The election passed off peacefully, there being no disturbance of any kind reported. In Ward 8 there were a number of challenges. In Ward 17 policemen in plain clothes were on the lookout for repeaters. There was one peculiar feature of the election in each precinct of this ward.

The Republicans were particularly busy in Dorchester, Brighton and Brookline. They used the telephone to learn whether each voter has cast his ballot. It was reported that the Republicans let loose quite a lot of money during the last hours of the campaign, and that this was utilized to-day in getting out every loose vote possible.

Martin Lomasney, the Democratic leader of Ward 8, said to-day:

"The early vote to-day was unusually heavy. The full strength of the Democratic party was shown in this section of the city."

Big Vote Cast.

There were eight challenges in Precinct 1, Ward 8, within an hour after the polls opened. The challenges were made by John J. Walsh, an attorney of No. 677 Meridian street, Ken Boone or Kelliher supporter. He charged that the men were non-residents, one living in Cambridge and one in Somerville, he said.

At 9 a. m. the largest vote ever polled in Ward 8 up to that hour had been cast. The average for the several precincts was about twenty-five per cent. ahead of last year. Politicians predicted that at least ninety per cent. of the registered vote in this ward and in Ward 6 would turn out.

Mr. Lomasney was at the Hendricks Club before 5 a. m. receiving reports from his lieutenants and directing the force of workers at his command. Kelliher workers were numerous, as were the regular Democratic ruiners. The latter were white-badges with the words "Foss, Cassidy and Victory." Kelliher's men were green badges.

Republicans for Kelliher.

The congressional fight in the Ninth District brought out a heavy vote. In Precinct 2 of Ward 9, John A. Kelliher's home ward, 200 votes had been cast before 8 o'clock. This is half of the total registration.

In Ward 7 political workers were active, but the early vote was about light. Kelliher men said that two-thirds of the Republican vote in this ward would go to their candidate rather than to Gaston, the Republican nominee. Democratic reports from Winthrop, which is solidly Republican, said that Kelliher would carry that town.

Kelliher toured the Ninth District early and personally supervised the work of his men. In Ward 9 vehicles of all kinds were used by his supporters to get out the vote. Murray workers were busy all forenoon in the district.

One of the Ward 9 Lieutenants said early to-day:

"Draper and Frothingham are going to get a good vote in this ward. That's all I can say about it. You know who."

Ward 9 is one of the strongest Democratic wards in the city, but the strong fight made by James J. Donovan against Dan J. Desmond, Democratic candidate for the Legislature, for the seat the speaker retained in, it was said, would not have been passed last night nor to-day. Draper and Frothingham.

Cotton for Cotton Men.

There was a fairly heavy vote cast in Wards 10 and 11 before 9 o'clock. Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, who voted about 9:30 o'clock at Commonwealth avenue and Berkeley street, predicted the success of the entire Republican State ticket. Former Governor Guild, who voted shortly after him at the same booth, was also sanguine.

Ward 10 the members of the Republican ward committee were out working for Fred W. Dudley, Jr., for Congress. They wore a small strip of cotton lace piece of flower on the lapels of their coats. Among those workers were Assistant United States District Attorney Fether and Charles H. Innes.

In Ward 12, one of the heaviest votes for many years was cast. This was particularly true of precinct 8 and 7 which are included in the Ninth Congressional District. James H. Doyle, who supported Congressman Kelliher for re-election said that Kelliher would get a substantial majority in Ward 12. Many voters were taken to the polls in automobiles, taxis and carriages in this ward.

Odds Favor Foss 10 to 6.

Some indication of the way betting men have viewed the situation is shown by the fact that only a few bets of money was being freely bet on even terms. At the Hendricks Club odds of 10 to 6 and then to 100 to 50 and gradually down to even until 11 o'clock. Foss would get 100 to 50 shot and finally the day the betting ranged between 2 to 1 and 10 to 6. A well known Boston lawyer was so confident of a Foss victory that he put $10 to a fifteen cent cigar that Foss would be elected. A supporter of the Democratic City Committee bet 2 to 1 on Foss.

At one of the hotels adjoining Ward 2 that James M. Curley would be beaten by Mitchel Galvin by at least 2,000 to 1. Fifth Con

ROOSEVELT VOTES IN FIGHTING MOOD

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Nov. 8.—"Why or how, I am going to carry on the fight," declared Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, as he cast his vote in the book and ballot booth at Sagamore Hill to-day. The Colonel entered the booth at 12:17 o'clock, bearing ballot number 1,017 in his hand. It took him about three minutes to vote.

SMOKES HIS FIRST CIGAR AT AGE OF 60

KOKOMA, Ind., Nov. 8.—It took J. C. Blacklidge sixty years to find out what pleasures in a smoke, for he has just begun at the ripe age of sixty.

Until now he never smoked a cigar, pipe or anything else. Oddly enough his first cigar did not make him sick. Instead he smoked it down to the butt and then calmly lighted another. Since he has been smoking steadily.

Boston American Election Bulletins

Election returns will be displayed by stereopticon by the BOSTON AMERICAN this evening on the front of the Weeks estate building, 93-95 Summer street, opposite the BOSTON AMERICAN office.

50,000 PLURALITY, FOSS PREDICTION AS VOTE IS CAST

I feel perfectly confident that I will be elected Governor of Massachusetts to-day. I expect the entire ticket to pull through with ease. I have information that leads me to believe that I will have a plurality outside of Boston that will reach 25,000, and I have every reason to believe that I will carry Boston by from 25,000 to 30,000.

I feel confident of winning by from 50,000 to 55,000 votes. This is a Democratic day. The voting is going on satisfactorily, there having been an unusually heavy Democratic vote early in the morning. The reports that have reached me from Boston districts and from outside of the city are very encouraging and fully corroborate my prediction of a landslide for our ticket.—Statement made to-day by Constituent Eugene N. Foss.

FOSS CHEERED AS HE VOTES

Congressman Foss left his home at No. 11 Revere street with Mrs. Foss at about noon to the polling place in the Bowditch School to-day, casting his ballot at 8:25 o'clock. Mr. Foss was enthusiastically greeted by the line of voters in the booth outside the schoolhouse, where a throng had gathered in expectation of his appearance to vote, he was given a rousing cheer.

"Hurrah for our next Governor!" came from the crowd.

Mr. Foss lifted his hat in response to the applause and followed his colleague. After voting, Congressman Foss walked to his home, where he remained for a short time resting up. His final tour of the city, in which he shook hands with voters, is the climax to an exceedingly strenuous campaign, and is greatly fatigued. He will receive the returns at home to-night.

DECLINES TO PAINT CORONATION SCENE

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Edwin A. Abbey, the American R. A., has declined the honor of painting the scene in Westminster Abbey when King George is crowned. He was selected to do the coronation picture for King Edward, which hangs in Buckingham Palace, but says Mr Abbey "never again!" The reason he gives is that he is "dissatisfied" after his first experience. It was necessary that he should obtain private sittings from something like fifty distinguished persons who took prominent part in the pageant.

DR. HENRY N. HOYT DIES AT WAKEFIELD

WAKEFIELD, Nov. 8.—Rev. Dr. Henry Nelson Hoyt, treasurer of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, is dead at his home, No. 22 Avon street. He was born in 1848 in Meridian, Cayuga county, N. Y., his parents being farmers, who moved to Michigan while he was a boy. In 1872 he graduated from Olivette college, and studied theology at the Union Theological seminary, New York. Harvard University conferred his degree in 1876 at Yale Divinity School.

BANKER'S DAUGHTER HOSPITAL NURSE

DENVER, Nov. 8.—Mrs. John Walter Best, nee Florence Kountz, daughter of Charles B Kountz of Kountz Brothers, New York bankers, is learning to be a nurse at the Denver Children's Hospital. She left home to devote her entire time to caring for little ones at the hospital. She makes her own bed and does other household work as the nurses are called upon to do.

BRIDE IS FORGIVEN FOR RUNAWAY MATCH

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—"All is forgiven; come home and receive our blessing and congratulations." Such is substance of the message sent by Mr. and Mrs. John Bechtold of No. 1227 Pennsylvania avenue, Newark, N. J., to their daughter Miss Ida, who is now the wife of George H. Hendricks of Little Rock, Ark., to whom she eloped a few days ago.

PLASS HEARING SET FOR NOV. 17

The Rev. Thomas E. Plass of the Redeemable Investment Company, who, charged with using the United States mails in a scheme to defraud, surrendered himself to the Federal District Attorney, in Today out on $3,000 bail. Sureties were furnished by Robert W. Bartlett of No. 15 Quincy street, Somerville, a real estate man, and Peter McKenna of No. 101 Pine street, Woburn, who is in the liquor business in Boston.

The cases of the Rev. Mr. Plass and Charles H. Brooks have been set down by United States Commissioner Hayes for November 17 for a hearing.

When the defendants voluntarily called into District Attorney Fremont's office he said: "I am Mr. Plass. I understand you want me."

First Assistant District Attorney Sanderland smiled and said that he guessed he knew almost the number. Then he produced a warrant sworn out on October 13, which charged Rev. Mr. Plass with being president of the Redeemable Investment Company, of which Brooks was secretary, and using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

United States Deputy Marshal Rahl was called into the room and then the warrant was read. After that Deputy Rahl took Rev. Mr. Plass formally into custody and arraigned him before United States Commissioner Hayes.

When he entered the office of the district attorney the Rev. Mr. Plass was accompanied by his counsel, Edward P. Boswell, and John P. Feeney, of Woburn, who is counsel for a number of local managers of the Redeemable Investment Company which was added by Brooks on October 13. Brooks was arrested at that time and half a dozen of the clerks and officers were taken as witnesses.

Mr. Plass said that he had gone away on business and did not know that there was any trouble with the company until he arrived in British Columbia. He said that he could not come back then, for he had some business to transact and planned to return as soon as he could, what he was to do, he did not say. He has large timber lands in British Columbia.

Mr. Plass lives at No. 164 Park street, Newton, with his wife and children.

ANSWER GREENE AS TO P. O. MEN

A statement has been issued by Arthur H. Brooks, secretary of the Massachusetts Civil Service Commission, declaring that there exists no relationship between Republican victory and the status of Postmaster Greene's political job.

"At a meeting of the Postmasters' Association in Lowell recently," said the statement, "at which addresses were made by Senator Lodge and Congressman Greene, one of the Massachusetts representatives in Congress, who is a candidate for re-election, the latter remarked that he had been asked in the course of his remarks, 'If any of you gentlemen are appointed by the Civil Service will retain you in office, and discharge you if you do not support the Republican ticket?' To which the reply was made that the appointments were made by the Commissioners. Whether the man who asked the question is to be reappointed, and you will hold them responsible, and you will hold them responsible.

The striking importation in the foregoing statement is the fact that the postmasters proceed to take an active part in politics. We hesitate to believe that they will actually be so foolish as to lose their positions. We hesitate to believe that the Congressman Greene could have intended to make it so.

The National Civil Service rules are clear and explicit. They provide that officers paid less than $1000 a year, of which there are 1,200 in this state, of which 900 are Republicans, and including one of two more.

Now, while there is doubtless much room for criticism of the conduct of the office of Postmaster of Boston, and while Postmaster Harding, one Republican appointment, may make a big showing, he proves outranked by Senator Lodge and will in most instances be removed, but Democrats whose chief work seems to be to make several important gains will owe their places to the good representatives.

Further, the Fusion ticket in the city headed by Ben W. Hooper, Republican, and a Democratic ticket, headed by Former Senator Taylor.

Dahlman Safe in Nebraska.

BRYAN favors the re-election of Governor Shafroth in Colorado, although the Republicans predict the election of John Shafroth in Colorado, although the Republicans predict the election of John Shafroth in Colorado, although the Republicans predict the election of John

SINGER FAVORS HUSBAND-COOK

Man should be the cook Nature originally destined him to run the kitchen stove, according to Lydia Lipkowska, one of the prima donnas of the Metropolitan Opera company. She believes cooking demands but little of the spirituelle that abound in the average woman.

"I really love this country, but I had to bring a cook with me from Russia," she says. "Much as I admire the American spirit, American cooking is terrible. I cannot get used to it, and I often wonder how the Americans succeed in all their enterprises so well when the food they swallow daily would give indigestion to a polar bear.

"I mean no slur on the American housewife; she is the woman that is destined to lead the world, and her knowledge of cooking does not shine as a cook. Anyhow, I hold that it is man, and not woman whom nature destined originally to be the cook. Man is much more grown than woman, and a kitchen stove demands but very little of the spirituelle which abounds in the average woman.

Her Cook a Genius.

"My chef is a wonder. The soups he serves are the best tonic for one in search of peace of mind. His roasts are symphonies, his desserts are poetry. I hold he is fortune awaiting one who could appreciate his recipies. Keep them secret! Not I! All the Americans or any assistance will have an opportunity to taste his concoctions, and any woman who wants to try her hand at preparing food according to his directions is welcome to the advice. But I do wish the wives would make their husbands do the cooking, the food would really improve.

"I hope my chef will not marry. If he does he will, like every other male, begin to suffer from an exaggerated ego and will make his wife miserable as superintendent. As a cook, he is a genius, as a worker by any other name he will be a failure, but I fear he will not realize it, and women are so selfish-sent that the one he weds will forcibly insist upon his playing the lord and master while she makes a mess of his life's work.

Good Dinner Dispels Grouch.

"But why look so far into the future? Why does the ghost of coming troubles disturb the joy of the present? I am in America, my little daughter is with me and the kitchen is presided over by my adored chef. There are so many clouds of worry overhanging the sky of an artistic existence why add thoughts of the future?

"This is my second season in this country and I really feel at home with the Americans. He me as well as I like them. I shall be contented, anyhow, don't you think it would be worth while to cement more firmly the traditional friendship between Russia and United States by introducing Russian cooking in this country?

"Think of how a grouch is dispelled by a good dinner. Russia is willing to serve America and America will love Russia a great deal more after having tasted Blini a la Cossack,' Beefsteak a la Muscovite and Chicken a la Kremlin. I believe that I can mean a diplomatic solution.

"Yes, I mean what I say when I tell you as American home needs without my chef's recipies all are welcome to them. I shall open the concession between New York and Boston, with occasional visits to Chicago and Philadelphia, and everywhere I go, my cook will go also."

DEACON W. A. STONE DEAD AT AGE OF 93

Funeral services for Deacon William A. Stone, 93, the second oldest Dartmouth alumnus and principal of several high schools, will be held at his home, 10 Whitney street, Cliftondale, to-morrow afternoon at 2. He was the oldest inhabitant of Cliftondale. He was born in Cornish, N. H., and was graduated from Dartmouth in 1844. He was principal of the Woburn and the Wakefield high schools and superintendent of the Woburn academy for several years he was in the flour business and later was manager of agencies for the Aetna Life Insurance Company.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM CALIFORNIA VICTORY

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Both the Democrats and Republicans are claiming victory in to-day's elections. Chairman Dewitt of the Democratic State Central Committee says he is confident that Theodore Bell will be elected Governor by a plurality ranging from 15,000 to 25,000, and a Democratic landslide. Chairman L. Lenzer of the Republican State Central Committee claims that Hiram Johnson will have a plurality from 40,000 to 60,000 and that the entire Congressional tickets seems to be safe.

WANTS ROSENHEIMER ARRESTED AGAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Walter B. Hough, father of Grace Hough, killed in Pelham Parkway by the automobile of Edward T. Rosenheimer, who was acquitted of murder, called on acting District-Attorney Nott to see if he could have Rosenheimer arrested under the new automobile law. Mr. Nott said that he could not instigate any proceedings against Rosenheimer, and told Hough to call on Thursday when District-Attorney Whitman would be back.

FINDS CHILDREN LIVING ON REFUSE

Dr. John L. Rogers, a prominent physician of South Boston, caused a sensation at the meeting of the Andrew Square Civic Association by his statement that certain persons had threatened with an epidemic unless children crowded about the dumps in Dorchester bay, near McNary street, and are refused from bakeries and eating factories that is regularly dumped there.

The refuse comes from the big south end bakeries, Dr. Rogers declared, also from several large confectionery factories. Mixed with all pastry are candy sweepings, pie fillings and many other articles. It is explained that the children dig into the piles and when they come across a piece of mince pie they think it's a prize and eat it, as they usually an old tin, with a similar result.

Urge Police Detail.

Pending an investigation by the Health Board of Health, it was suggested that Police Commissioner O'Meara be requested with and urged to detail a special officer there continually, that the children may be forcibly prevented from their very dangerous practice. The matter will be brought up at the public meeting, and the public interested on the possible evil effects of this particular collection. C. F. Flynn will probably submit the nuisance.

Dr. Shea Surprised.

Thomas H. Shea of No. 74 Microline street, chief medical inspector of the Boston Board of Health, when his attention was called to the conditions in South Boston expressed astonishment, and said he had not believed it possible such conditions could exist.

"In the first place," he said, "any one found in the dumps is forbidden and cannot do it. In addition to that, I am surprised. Only paper, rubbish and similar refuse is supposed to be dumped there. I know Dr. Rogers is very much interested in the matter, and I know Andrew Square Civic Association, but I hope he has got his facts straight, for if children are digging there they have to get their food from there, it is also a fact that the authorities could soon remedy matters. I cannot believe it."

How I Made My Hair Grow

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and every one proprietary, but they all signally failed; many of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious, and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures, I finally found a simple prescription which, from unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt, the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a positive stimulant to the growth of the hair and the restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is a wonderful preventative of dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliance, and the scalp a healthy tone and free-from-disease condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange. If you have a friend who need it you cannot find any thing that will more surely stop the falling of its hair and wonderfully increase its growth, but it practically restores it to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful prescription from almost any druggist, and they are as follows:

Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Menthol Crystals (a substance like Camphor) 2 grs. If you like a perfumed add a few drops of Lavender Perfume, which mixes perfectly with any of the ingredients. This, however, is optional.

Be sure to get the Bay Rum and Menthol Crystals in the Lavenia de Composee package. One of them contains enough for a pint of hair tonic. Add the Menthol Crystals to the Bay Rum, then pour in the Lavenia de Composee and add the Tre-Kalm Perfume. Let it stand a short time and it is ready for use.

Hall-Perrine Drug Company, the well-known and popular druggists of this city, have filled this formula for many of their customers, and state that the satisfaction from its use is so great that they have found it necessary to make special provision to fill the prescription promptly and carefully.

INDICT MEN IN SCHEFTELS FIRM

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Several indictments were handed down by the federal grand jury in connection with the raids made by government agents on the down-town brokerage firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co., and the subsequent arrest of the members of the firm. The charges against Scheftels' employes are that they swindled the public through the mails by pocketing orders and expediting fake others.

The firm is said to have cleared about $2,000,000 from the sale of mining stock during the last four years. The government agents declare that information in the department of justice showed that thousands of persons of modest means were swindled by the glittering advertisements of the firm. For over two days the Federal agents gathered the evidence on which the raid was the outcome. George Graham Rice, the dominant partner of the company, was also booked the day after the raid. He gave bail and was released. Other prominent individuals in the company were B. H. Scheftels, president, George Sullivan, better known as "Red Letter Sullivan," in charge of the correspondence department; Roger P. Bolger, treasurer and cashier; Charles B. Stone, secretary and head of bookkeeping department; John Delaney in charge of the men on the curb, and Ralph E. Waterman.

TAFT CASTS BALLOT IN CINCINNATI, O.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 8.—President Taft arrived in this city today to vote in the State election. He made a hurried trip from Washington by rail, so that he would be in time to cast his ballot. He was accompanied as far as Baltimore by John Hays Hammond, who was on his way to Gloucester to vote in the Massachusetts elections. President Taft leaves here late this afternoon and will return to Washington. News of the elections all over the country will be flashed to him on board the train.

BALL TO AID ERIN.

Michael Davitt Branch, United Irish League, will hold a concert and ball in Paul Revere Hall Mechanics building, next Thursday evening. The proceeds will be devoted to the Irish parliamentary fund.

GATES'S PLUNGE COST $40,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Charles G. Gates, the "Bethlehemiller" John W. Gates' son, who has dropped into the spending life in New York under his operation for appendicitis in July, on Thursday night last. It has followed.

Arnold Rothstein, a notorious gambler, whose house on West Forty-sixth street was rounded open through so many of New York's spasm of virtue that the most rigid of investigators never think of bothering him any more, acted as Mr. Gates's host. A well-known vice agent and sporting man was the escort. Much roulette and some faro were the mediums through which young Mr. Gates and his bankroll were parted.

It was past the time for the banks to be open when Mr. Gates was ready to depart. Then, fearful that their guest might still have some means to complete of their bankrolls, Shea accompanied Mr. Gates to the bank, where a $40,000 check was cashed.

Unfortunately for Rothstein, Shea failed to return to the Forty-sixth street house after he got the money. He just racked it for his own pocket.

Rothstein sought his partner, found him at the Hotel Knickerbocker and demanded an explanation and an accounting. Mr. Shea then informed Rothstein that he had been watching the progress of their fortunes in the gambling house business for some time and had decided that Rothstein had been getting the best of his friends. He figured that the profits of Mr. Gates's visit to the house would just about even him up for what he had lost by what he characterized as Mr. Rothstein's favoritism to his friends. His principal complaint was that his partner had allowed a young lawyer to win as much as he liked and an offense to be liked on must turn out of the box" in favor of.

This is a privilege which is accorded to no house player in any but three cards to walk to the box. If you can call the order and keep them will come out you can collect. So young lads at the odds of 4 to 1. Mr. Shea stated that one player had had such remarkable success in "calling the turn" on the cards that the bank felt had been sorely depleted. He therefore declined to settle on the Gates transaction. Rothstein declined the great anger and dissolved the partnership. He is now operating by himself.

MANCHESTER MARTYRS' DAY

To arrange for the anniversary of Allen, Larkin and O'Brien, the executive committee of United Irish League will meet Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the office of the national secretary, Globe building.

GUNBOAT YORKTOWN SENT TO AMAPALA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—American interests at Amapala, Honduras, the next few days, will be in the care of the United States gunboat Yorktown, which has reached that port to relieve the Princeton, and to watch developments in the contest between President Davila and General Valladares for control of the garrison at Amapala. The latest report received at the State Department from Charge Sinclair Minister McGreevy at Tegucigalpa, said that General Valladares was still holding the garrison.

TITLED HUSBAND NOT WITH HIS SICK WIFE

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—As preparations were being made to remove the Countess Gladys Deacon Moreny to Cook County Hospital to the home of her millionaire husband, H. H. Kilgallon, the count suddenly packed up and went to the New Southern hotel, registering as "Mr. Beaudry City," he spite this his father-in-law said: "The count is living with us at the hospital. We had a private dining room arranged for that purpose. There is no trouble at all."

TESTATOR WILLS $500 DINNER TO FRIENDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Twelve friends of the late Rufus Sidenburg, a well-to-do business man who died last month, are directed by the terms of the will to eat a dinner costing $500 at the expense of the estate. The selection of the guests and the time and place of the dinner are left to his executor, with the sole proviso that the dinner must be given within three months of the testator's death.

RUNAWAY PLUNGES THROUGH WINDOW

ROCKLAND, Nov. 8.—A runaway horse owned by Charles Bacon plunged through a window of the fruit store of Joseph Paremano and after freeing itself continued for half a mile before it was caught. Mr. Bacon was thrown out, but not seriously injured. Joseph mourns the loss of $14.75 worth of apples and grapes.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are probably responsible for more sickness and suffering than all other causes combined, according to the best physicians, as other causes. kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys must because they do most and should have attention first.

If you feel that your kidneys are to cause your sickness or run down condition commence taking Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, because as soon as your kidneys are restored to health they will help all the other organs to health.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease.

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalency of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are the most common disease that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patient or physicians, who usually confine themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease constantly undermines the system.

A Trial will Convince Anyone.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable results in the most distressing cases.

Symptoms of Kidney Trouble.

Swamp-Root is fat recommended for everything but if you are obliged to pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or burning sensation in passing, brickdust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, may be loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease may be stealing upon you, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Swamp-Root Is Pleasant to Take.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghampton, N. Y., which you will find on every bottle.

If you Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best.

Swamp-Root is always kept up to its high standard of purity and excellence. A sworn certificate of purity with every bottle.

SAMPLE BOTTLE FREE—To prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands of letters received from men and women who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy they needed. The value and success of Swamp-Root is so well known that you are advised to send for a sample bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the Boston Daily American. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

BERNHARDT NOT AFTER BALLOT

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—In No. 2 of her series of articles on "Great Women I Have Been," Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest of living actresses, to-day describes "Monna Vanna."

By SARAH BERNHARDT.

I have never played the masterpiece of Maeterlinck in this country. But "Monna Vanna" is one of the women, great from any point of view, whose souls are reincarnated for the moment by the artist who seeks them with ardor, talent and work—always work.

Since it has been given here already, your public—I really regard it as my public—is familiar with the story of this wife who ransoms her besieged city by going forth to meet the unknown conqueror, clad only in a cloak, as he had demanded. Although wrenched by a man, it is difficult sometimes for men to understand this character. No wife who loved her husband, they declare, could offer herself and his honor as a ransom.

They are right. "Monna Vanna" did not love her husband with a great love. Does she not make the assertion that life is above love?

The Earthquakes o/ Love.

She has a tranquil, conjugal affection which is not romance or poetry, but is the foundation of many homes—perhaps the best foundation, for when you build in the tropics of passion you have to look out for earthquakes.

The soul of "Monna Vanna" burned with a great devotion to her people. This devotion to humanity is very frequent among women, though it is not generally understood. Love—passionate love—has been judged to be the uniapring and motive of all our actions. But women are capable of the greatest acts of devotion and sacrifice for a people, a cause or an idea.

I do not mean the exceptional woman—I am not sure that there are any exceptional women. In my opinion the great situation, the great need, draws the great man or woman to meet it from the mass of commonplace citizens, takes him or her aside, and makes them over to its requirements. The courage of a woman, her devotion, her sacrifice, will rise as high as its source, the need of the man or the people, which calls it forth.

Votes for Women.

There are those who think this public devotion should have political expression. The question of votes for women, while not perserious in France, is of the hour in England and the United States. The laws if you country are very just to women. In France they leave very much to be desired.

With everything that concerns the personal control of her fortune and rights of the equal guardianship of her children, I am in entire accord. But to vote I have no desire. Politics is so dirty. And for one who controls it there are a thousand unreasoning slaves.

To me, I must confess, the idea of a woman deputy or a woman minister seems ridiculous. And that I question the morality. God would not have confided the future to a being he fouhd to be inferior both in mind and in body. I agree with you in making a speech from the platform when you have a child in a few weeks?

You urge there is nothing in maternity which should excite fear. I have the tenderest feelings of reverence and awe, and that woman should abandon her political rights through fear of contact with debasing hands. I agree with you as to the hopeless debasement of those who deal with politics. It taught me a sacred fact of existence. Napoleon ordered his soldiers to present arms to an expectant mother. He was right.

Oratory or an Heir.

But a woman minister could not deliver an address at such a time without showing that a little too much fervor, a little too much excitement of debate, might endanger the future of her child. Her oratory or her acts must suffer. There would be a thousand such complications. The advocates of woman suffrage cite the queens of history at Argiments.

We all know that these women governed through their ministers. No woman wants to be a slave as a queen. Even to-day queens suffer the greatest indignity that can be put upon a woman—an intrusion into the privacy of birth.

Imagine having to feel that certain of future must be present at the birth of one's child to attest that one is not an impostor to the throne of the country. I cannot imagine a woman submitting to such humiliation. I should think she would rise up and drive them forth with whips. Yet, that is what queens endure, that is what the humblest woman in the land is protected from.

Perhaps this has not much to do with the character of "Monna Vanna," who for my part did not desire to vote. But I am sure did not endure every indignity the character exemplifies to express what I think about her civic rights.

PLAN MEMORIAL TO SAILORS OF 1776

In honor of the sailors who fought for freedom in the American revolution the Daughters of the Revolution are to place in Bancroft Hall, in the Naval Academy at Annapolis, a bas-relief, the work of William Cooper of New York. Senator Lodge has written the inscription for the Memorial. The D. R. members all over the country are busy raising funds. This Winter, among other affairs, the Massachusetts State Council, which is the governing board, will give a series of card parties the first this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Cleveland Rogers, Mrs. George H. Plummer, 330 Summer street, Lynn.

RACES FROM NORTH TO HIS DYING FATHER

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 8.—Wilson Potter, a son of Colonel Thomas Potter, a millionaire manufacturer of Philadelphia, who is dying at Atlantic City, arrived from Conway, Alaska, on the steamer Princess Beatrice. He left at once for Seattle, accompanied by Mr. Cortey of Philadelphia, who will be best man at his. Wilson Potter was hunting big game in the Yukon country when his father's illness became critical. Indians and mounted policemen found him there.

BRATTLEBORO GETS NEW COTTON MILLS

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Nov. 8.—The final steps to assure the location of the New Fort Dummer cotton mills here were taken when the town voted to exempt the concern from taxation for ten years. The work of erecting the factory buildings will be started at once. Edward G. Chase of Providence, R. I., will be president and manager of the new mills, which will start with 500 employees on the pay rolls.

FISH LEAPED FROM SEA TO SHIP'S DECK

VINEYARD HAVEN, Nov. 8.—"An absolutely true fish story" was related by Captain Lewis of the schooner Antoinette, which put in here while enroute from Florence N. J., for Boston. When fifteen miles southwest of Fire Island the Antoinette sailed through large quantities of mackerel schooling on top of the water. One of them, a fish eighteen inches long, according to Captain Lewis, jumped over the rail and landed on deck.

EAST BOSTON GIRLS WHO GET FORTUNES BY COURT RULING

MRS ANNA NELSON

MISS ELSIE NELSON

BOSTON GIRLS GET A FORTUNE

According to a judgment rendered to the Royal Superior Court of Sweden, two East Boston girls, Mrs. Anna and Miss Elsie Nelson of No. 311 Sumner street, are to receive $27,000 each. The two girls are beneficiaries under the will of their stepfather, Count Carl Cronhjelm, who died at Stockholm in 1904. The property left by the Count amounts to a half million crowns when the debts are paid. The share which the Boston girls are to receive will be forwarded them very soon by the executor of the Count's will, a Stockholm lawyer named Carl Lagerfelt. The news has just been received in Boston.

Count Carl Cronhjelm, who belonged to a very old and distinguished family, came to this country in his early youth. His journeys brought him to Boston where he met Mrs. William Nelson, a widow.

Count Carl and Mrs. Nelson later married. Mrs. Nelson, when she married the count had two young children, Elsie and Anna, better known as "Tillie."

In 1899 Count Carl received word that the possessor of the family estate had died and it was found that he was next in all to the whole fortune. With the two girls the Count and his wife left Boston for Stockholm, where the Castle Floda, at that time worth a million crowns, was ready to receive them. Countess Cronhjelm, mother of the two girls, died at Stockholm in 1900. She was buried there and the Count ordered that in the event of his death he be buried at her side. He also ordered that on his gravestone be engraved the following words: "May He Rest In Peace After Life's Struggle."

By a will of 1902, Count Carl bequeathed two-fifths of his fortune to the Boston girls. The remainder was given to institutions and friends in Sweden.

But according to a Swedish law the estate, upon the Count's death could not be disposed of according to the will while there was living a son by name Cronhjelm. It was known that another member of the family, Count Alfred Robert Cronhjelm, was born in 1840, but emigrated to America in 1875. Search was made in this country for the missing Count Alfred and it was found that he died at North Whitehall, Lehigh County, Pa.

MAURETANIA AFTER RECORD

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The Mauretania, queen of the ocean, is out for another record. This is not to be merely a one-way record, but she will attempt to cut time off her run both ways and do the round trip in eleven days, something that has never been attempted in the history of the world.

In short, the present day greyhound is going to make a trip from Queenstown to New York, unload and reload, and then go back all in the same time it took a first-class steamship to cross the ocean so recently that it can be remembered by persons now living.

It has been planned to make the feat a sort of a Christmas present to the world. And it is expected the record will stand a long time if it does stand, undoubtedly, for a year, when the Mauretania will try it again.

The plan is to land the great Christmas mails in England for distribution through the United Kingdom before Christmas Eve.

The big Cunarder will leave Liverpool December 16, and it is expected that even at that time she will carry some few Christmas presents for relatives and friends on this side from persons on the other. If she does these she will receive them will have twenty-four hours in which to unload and ship them back just to show that they, too, had not forgotten. They will surely have time to send back a Christmas card.

WRECK OF PALMER MENACE TO SHIPS

After almost a year, the wreck of the big five-masted schooner Davis Palmer, that foundered off the coast in the big Christmas blizzard last year, is becoming a menace to navigation. Captain Edward Pease, of Station S, the lighthouse master, had his attention called to the wreck when he was cruising near in the steamer Investigator. He found that a section of one of the masts has become detached and was floating as an angle of forty-five degrees, though still attached to the sunken rigging of the schooner.

DIVORCE SUIT BASED ON HUSBAND'S KISS

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—Because her husband is kissing her used either too much ardor or too much strength, and because she objects to osculation as a general proposition, Mrs. Amelia Schmidt of this city is suing for divorce on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. The alleged osculation, which is the basis of the suit for divorce, is said to have occurred August 8 last at the home of Mrs. Schmidt's mother-in-law, where she confessed to remorse at the suggestion of her husband.

FALLS UNDER CART, IS BADLY HURT

Adrian W. Rowding, 30, of No. 20 West Cottage street, was seriously hurt by falling under the wheels of a cart at Howard and Court streets and is at the Relief Hospital, in a critical condition, with internal injuries. The man who was with Rowding is under arrest on a drunkenness charge. It is said he may they have evidence that the men were racing and that Rowding was pushed off the sidewalk and under the cart.

TIME EXTENDED TO PHONE RATE CHANGE

In a letter sent yesterday to the Massachusetts Highway Commission accepting the recommendation that the time for the change in rate be extended to November 1, 1911, the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company announces that any of the subscribers to the four and six party lines who have applied for the new rates will be retransferred to their former service, they must apply for retransfer on or before next March 21.

INFANT PARALYSIS STRIKES CORNELL

ITHACA, Nov. 8.—Infantile paralysis has broken out at Cornell. R. L. Solomon and R. B. Schofield of the freshman class are confined in the infirmary with the first cases of the disease in this city. Solomon, who has been on the freshman football squad, was at first thought to be suffering from an injury sustained on the football field a week ago, but his similarity is denied.

$800 DEATH VERDICT AGAINST ELEVATED

A verdict for $800 for John McMahon, administrator, against the Boston Elevated was found by a second session Superior Court jury in a suit for $75,000 for fatal injuries received by John McMahon.

TUFTS HELPED BY SEGREGATION

The reasons for the separation of women and men at Tufts College, and the advantages that are expected to result from the segregation, are set forth by President Frederick W. Hamilton in an article in the first issue of the Tuftonian on the "Social Segregation Means to Tufts." He says in part:

"The Jackson women have every facility for instruction which is offered to the Tufts students. There is not and never has been any desire to put them off with anything inferior of any sort. The same opportunity to enjoy the instruction of the department heads as freely as Tufts women ever did.

"An increased registration of men in the school of liberal arts shows that a much better class of men are coming to Tufts, primarily because of the segregation. In New England, at least, young men and women of college age prefer to be in educational institutions of their own sex. The writer of these lines believes that there is a good deal more of this feeling in other parts of the country than the public generally realizes.

"An increased registration of women points to a rapidly growing desire on the part of women to have that segregation which is every reason to believe that segregation will be even greater when for Tufts and Jackson than Tufts has ever known."

BIRTHDAY DIAMOND FOR HARRY COHEN

In honor of his fiftieth birthday, the friends of Harry Cohen surprised him yesterday at his home, No. 25 Holborn street, Roxbury, by presenting him with a cluster diamond pin. The committee which composed the large company of surprise smokers were: William Smith, Myer Yesnick, Gus Perry, Jacob J. Morse, L. M. Goulston, Jacob Simons, Henry Arthur Moser, Rosenfeld, O. Fales, James F. Mullen, George Adams, Nat Linsey, Harry Levy, Ben Lett, J. Roman, Henry Kehar, Joseph Mole.

MARRIED SECOND TIME BEFORE HE KNEW LAW

BROCKTON, Nov. 8.—Malcomb Wallace of this city, who married Miss Ellis, both of Bridgewater, Mass., recently, after his first wife had secured a divorce from him only six months before, says that he did not know of the Massachusetts law which prescribed that he should wait two years after his divorce before contracting another marriage. He prohibits remarriage within the two years, but provides no penalty for anyone who disobeys it, Brockton officials say.

G. A. R. COURT OF INQUIRY APPOINTED

John E. Gilman of Boston, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has appointed the court of inquiry requested by Past Senior Vice Commander John McKinzy of Fall River to investigate charges which, it is alleged, were offered against the latter at the encampment of the Grand Army held at Atlantic City in September.

SCHOOL PUPILS AT CORN SHOW

WORCESTER, Nov. 8.—The second day of the big Worcester Corn Show today surpassed the success of opening day. The school teachers and children of Worcester were granted a half holiday this afternoon to visit the fair.

Despite the interest in the election here to-day, the corn show loomed large as an attraction. Trains brought in hundreds of farmers from all parts of New England.

Speakers at the fair have all pointed out that the chief lessons to be taught are to the farmers of New England. The question which the exposition sets out to answer is: Can New England farmers grow corn profitably? Those who have been here and seen the exhibits say the reply is in the affirmative.

The government exhibits of Western corn products has attracted much attention, as much indeed as the exhibits of local corn production.

Some of the experts who have addressed the farmers and general public are Professor Alva Agee of the Pennsylvania State College of Agriculture, Dr. H. J. Wheeler of Cornell University and Professor C. A. Mayhu of the Agricultural College of Guelph ont.

Tomorrow will be Governor's Day, and the fair management expects that the chief day will set up a new mark for attendance.

Noted Doctor's Best Prescriptions Will Save Much Suffering and Money

Cures a Cough or Cold in a Day

A cold should never be permitted to linger or it is extremely dangerous. Pneumonia, consumption and other dread diseases follow neglected colds. The following are one of the best and quickest cough and cold cures known to the medical profession. "Two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine. Add these to half a pint of good whisky and shake them well. Use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours." Smaller doses for children according to age. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or can get them from his wholesale house. Any one can easily mix them, but be sure to get the real Concentrated Pine. It comes in half ounce vials, packed in tin tubes in eight cases.

Best Rheumatism Prescription

The following will be found to work wonders in promptly relieving rheumatism and lame back. This was published here last winter and thousands were cured by its use. "One ounce syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce of Toris compound. Add these to half a pint good whisky or sherry even if it is preferred. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bedtime. Any druggist has these ingredients in stock or will quickly get them from his wholesale house. Any one can mix this. Full directions how to use and mix them. The good effects of this treatment are usually felt after the first few doses.

CAB RACE LOST BY PATROLMAN

Two young men climbed out through the transom of Morelli's restaurant at No. 7 Hudson street early today just as Patrolman Murphy of the Joy street station came around the corner. The youths dropped to the ground and started away, but Murphy caught one. He wanted to get the other, too, so a "right-away" cab started down Hudson street after them.

Murphy held up the cab, marched his prisoner in pointed to the other with who he had been in the restaurant, and told to the latter to "come here." The latter, seeing his companion in the cab with one hand, Murphy seized out the cab window and reached for the other, but the latter put the cab in motion and the driver and the children according to age. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or can get them from his wholesale house. Any one can easily mix this, but be sure to get the real Concentrated Pine. It comes in half ounce vials, packed in tin tubes in eight cases.

"Hold up there!" cried Murphy, and the driver

EARLY VOTE POINTS TO A FOSS VICTORY

gressional District were offered, with few takers. One man made personal bets even on Curley's election, but there was very little Galvin money in sight.

A heavy vote was reported everywhere. Over in Charlestown, more than 1,000 ballots were cast in the eighteen precincts during the first hour.

WARD 6.

In Ward 6, with 2,700 registered voters, about 87 per cent. of the vote was polled in the city election. This percentage will be increased to-day. In view of the fact that in the last gubernatorial campaign only 80 per cent. of the vote was registered in Ward 6, and only 78 per cent in Ward 8, the interest taken this year is apparent.

WARD 8.

Ward 8, Boston, known as the most thickly settled Democratic district in New England, sent out a big vote to the polls early in the day. The workers at the polls were surprised at the speed with which the vote was registered, and at an early hour it was seen that Martin Lomasney was not going to allow the wards to show any falling off in Democratic strength.

It was agreed by both Republican and Democratic workers that the ward will register one of the largest Democratic votes in its history.

In Ward 8 last year at the city elections eighty-six per cent. of the vote of 3,000 registered voters was polled. It will be likely that fully ninety per cent. will be brought out to-day.

WARD 10.

By 8 o'clock more than 500 votes had been cast in Ward 10, Back Bay. Interest was strong in the congressional fight, workers being in evidence for Powers and Cotton. Former Alderman Anderson had charge of the Cotton workers.

WARD 11.

Election workers were on the job early in Ward 11, Back Bay, to-day, using taxicabs chiefly in bringing out the vote. By 8 o'clock 500 votes had been registered. This was about the same as last year. Workers for Congressman Powers kept on the hotfoot and wore blue badges. Workers for Foss and Cassidy wore white badges.

WARD 22.

Ward 22 turned out the largest number of voters ever registered in the early voting hours in any election day. In the eight precincts, between 6 and 9 o'clock, an average of 200 ballots had been cast to a precinct. Chief Interest centred in the State fight and in the Congressional contest between Cotton and Powers. Between Foss and Draper sentiment indicated close voting in the ward. In four precincts Cotton was said to be leading. In the other four it was a slip and cut battle, with Peters showing gains.

ROXBURY.

In the Roxbury wards, especially in precincts 1, 2 and 5 of Ward 19, the early vote was heavy. Two hundred had voted in precinct 5 at 7 o'clock. At Precinct 1 a line was waiting at 6 o'clock. No. 3 is a quiet precinct, but here also the vote was large early. These precincts are strongly Democratic.

"The people will roll up a splendid victory for me," said James M. Curley, "Boston will do itself proud. I will get out a vote in line with old time Democratic spirit in the Peninsular District. I have confidence in the voters of Ward 15, where, it is said, I am to be beaten. I believe that all stand by the Democratic ticket, from top to bottom. I shall carry every ward in the district, including Quincy. I concede Milton to Mr. Galvin.

BROOKLINE.

In Brookline, the early vote was light. The wealthy residents here began to get out about 9 o'clock. All voting was done in the Town Hall. Here the vote for governor, for bringing the vote from the corners of the town. Representative Norman White and his friends were also at the polls at 7 a. m.

CHARLESTOWN.

The Charlestown precincts were among the liveliest in Boston to-day, so far as interest in the voting was concerned. In the eighteen precincts, more than 1,000 ballots were cast during the first hour to-day.

Autos were flying about, picking up voters here and there, from the time the polls opened. There was much talk about the Keliher-Murray-Oakes contest for Congress—as much as there was about the gubernatorial contest.

LYNN.

The early vote in Lynn indicated the largest vote in that city since the election of Douglas. Democratic leaders predicted that Foss would carry Lynn by from 1,000 to 2,500.

The Democrats were unusually active and set the pace for the Republican hustlers. Both sides used carriages and autos in getting out the vote.

In the Congressional fight, the early vote showed that the result would be close between Congressman Ernest W. Roberts, Republican, and the Democratic candidate, Walter H. Creamer. Roberts has usually rolled up a plurality of several thousand from Lynn. While the Democrats claimed a victory for Creamer, the Republicans admitted that Roberts has lost enough votes to make the battle exceedingly close.

In the West Lynn section, the warm fight between Senator Frank P. Bennett, Republican, and Philip S. Kiely, Democratic nominee for the State Senate, proved the centre of interest. Early in the voting was polled in West Lynn, and the indications were that the result would be close. Republican workers agreed that Kiely was making a great run.

BRAINTREE-WEYMOUTH.

In the Braintree-Weymouth section today, great interest was shown in the congressional contest between Congressman Daley, Democrat, against the Republican nominee, John W. Weeks, in the Twelfth Congressional District. From the excitement expressed at the polls, the indications were that Daley would roll up a Weeks' plurality considerably. The voting in both towns was heavy, and much interest was taken in the gubernatorial contest.

MIDDLEBORO.

A triangular contest for Representative in the Seventh Plymouth District resulted in the polling of a heavy vote in Middleboro to-day. Several hundred workingmen cast their ballots before they left the town on the early train. In the first hour more than a hundred votes were registered. The indications were that the total vote out to-day reached between 1,200 and 1,500.

For Representative the contest lay between William T. Way of Plympton, Democrat; Charles M. Hutchinson, Independent Republican and strong anti-Lodge candidate, and Alexander Holmes, the regular Republican nominee. After a long period of inaction, the Holmes backers started some eleventh hour campaigning. The friends of Hutchinson claimed a protection. The indications are that the great inroads were made on the Republican stronghold through the great work of Way and his supporters.

MALDEN.

In Malden, the early vote was very heavy, over half the registered vote being polled at 9 o'clock. Malden is a Republican stronghold and the Draper forces were not worrying. Foss men, however, worked hard. The result for Governor could not be predicted.

MEDFORD.

Medford was expected to give Draper the usual Republican majority of 500 votes. There were no local contests, so that the vote was rather light up to noon. Medford is in Congressman McCall's district, and on account of the fight made on him this year, his vote is of doubtful size.

MELROSE.

In Melrose during the first two hours the heaviest vote on record was cast. Melrose is usually Republican, but Foss leaders put up a hard fight, and was said the result would be close. Outside of Governor the rest of the Republican ticket was conceded a win. In Melrose, Malden and Everett Congressman Roberts M. Roberts was hopeful of a strong support.

In Everett the early vote was heavy, leaders of both parties conceded that Foss would carry the city by a big majority. The normal Republican plurality is about 500. The contest for Senator between Richard E. Heroon, Democrat, and Wilmot R. Evans, Republican, excited much interest as both men live in Everett.

CAMBRIDGE.

In Cambridge early indications pointed to a very heavy vote. In the factory district and all over the city efforts were made by both parties to get the whole vote out at any cost. Much interest was shown in the fight between George S. Raymond and ex-Representative Harry M. Stevens for Senator in the Second Middlesex District. They had every means of conveyance from a new horse rig to get the voters to the polls.

BRIGHTON.

Up to 7:30 o'clock in Ward 22, Brighton, the voting was about as heavy as the last Mayoralty election and heavier than in the primary elections. Precincts 2, 5, 6, 7, normally Democratic, showed little change in favor of Draper while in Precincts 1, 3 and 4, the vote seemed about even, Draper having a shade of advantage. In the First, Peters seemed to be leading in all precincts.

EAST BOSTON.

In both the East Boston wards the voting was heavy. The Democratic workers were out early, wearing white ribbons marked "Foss, Cassidy and Victory." Because of the activity of the supporters for each, main interest in the East Boston wards centered in the fight between Keliher and Murray for the Congressional election. For Congressman Keliher in Alderman Giblin, who was defeated for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the caucus, looked after the interests of Keliher in Ward 1, and John F. Sullivan led the Keliher forces in Ward 2.

Working for Murray in Ward 1 were William F. McClain, former president of the Democratic City Committee; Thomas F. Blandell and James A. Nolin. In Ward 2 the Murray workers were ex-Alderman Michael J. Leary, Democratic committeeman for the Hon. Michael J. Brophy and Dennis A. O'Neil.

REVERE.

A lively fight in the First Suffolk District for the State Senate between Ira Edward J. Grainger, and Edward B. Keeling of Winthrop brought out a good vote in Revere where the interest was chiefly in the Senatorial contest. The fight is for control of the First Suffolk District for two years. Apparently, the Revere voters took but passing interest in the gubernatorial election.

WINTHROP.

Winthrop voters made an early start for the polls and an unusually heavy vote was expected on account of the first join fight in the First Suffolk District. It is the first Senatorial contest in the district for the State Senate. This is Edward B. Keeling of Winthrop, Republican, who is opposing Ira Edward J. Grainger.

CHELSEA.

Local fights and issues had no effect in a class by itself among Massachusetts cities to-day, when the voters crowded the polls. Chelsea is the only city in the Commonwealth which voted on local questions and nominees. The voting was heavy, and the Foss sentiment was strong, indicating that the Democratic candidate for Governor secured a good majority in Chelsea as did James H. Vahey last year.

The local fight for board control was an all-absorbing issue. Commissioner Alfred E. Biggs, Republican mayoralty candidate of 1907, by David M. Hudson, former chief of police of Chelsea, was run on an independent ticket, having been defeated in the Republican caucus.

The license question was another issue that helped to make the day a notable one in Chelsea. Another contest was in the choice of two members of the school committee. Chelsea had also to decide to-day whether or not the police of the city shall have one day off in fifteen.

SOUTH BOSTON.

In South Boston, surface indications during the early hours were that Foss was not receiving the full Democratic vote. There was a good deal of talk of voting for Draper and Cassidy. The latter had many supporters in these wards.

Indications point to a big vote. In each of the thirteen South Boston precincts the vote for the first hour ranged from eighty to a hundred, and the Foss workers, at the polls, distinguished by their white badges, made every effort to get out the full vote. A number of automobiles were concentrated here at noon, to get the full vote from the factories.

DORCHESTER.

A vote was polled in Dorchester that was equal to strength the Fitzgerald-Storrow contest.

In Ward 20 an aggregate vote of 4,400 had been cast at 10:15, an average of 500 votes to a precinct.

At the same hour twelve precincts in Ward 24 had polled 3,000 votes. Foss sentiment was strong throughout, although these are strong Republican wards.

In the Eighth Senatorial District many Republicans were voting for Martin P. Curley and kniding Harry Ham, the regular Republican candidate. Republican factions of the anti-Republican League were working openly against Ham.

In the Tenth Congressional District, James M. Curley was getting a big vote and the betting was 2 to 1 on him at 10 o'clock.

James McGinty, Democratic candidate for Representative, was getting a big vote in Ward 20, where Harry Cummings was being knifed as a Lodge candidate.

It looked good for Michael H. Murray men are being elected

In Ward 24 and it was believed he would be returned a winner in the Ninth Senatorial District, more especially because of the division on the candidacy of Senator Lyman H. Stevens, Republican, and the Rev. Lyman H. Sweet, of Ward 25. There was little betting.

SALEM

In Salem, the first three hours' voting indicated that the heaviest vote in years would be cast. Up to 10 o'clock 2,184 votes had been cast, against 2,292 last year. There was strong Foss sentiment, and he was expected to carry Salem by about 500. Last year the city gave Vahey 125, and two years ago Draper won by 1,130. About 85 per cent of the registered voters were expected to appear at the polls this year. With the exception of the head of the ticket, the Republican candidates will probably win

HARMON GETS BIG VOTE IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—A heavy vote was polled here during the early hours despite the fall-off in registration. There is much cutting of the ballot, but the Democrats claim Cleveland and Cuyahoga county by 5,000 for Harmon. A poll of registered voters indicates this city is elected. The weather is favorable.

KANSAS VOTE NORMAL.

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 8.—Although ideal election weather prevailed throughout Kansas, the early polling indicated only a normal vote. The Republicans claimed the election of W. R. Stubbs, candidate for Governor by 35,000, and the Democrats claimed several State offices. Insurgency and the initiative and referendum were live issues in the fight. Eight Congressmen

R. I. DEMOCRATS CLAIM VICTORY

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 8.—Reports received in this city from all parts of the State to-day indicated the biggest vote on record in the last twenty years has been polled. Despite the unfavorable weather, the early morning rain and snow, the open fires, snow storm and floods, crowded the polling places throughout the day, no doubt owing to the interest over voting men continued to participate in the discussions that arose concerning the results.

The intense interest was manifested in the struggle between the Republicans and Democrats to secure control of the Legislature, as the deciding factor in the election of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich in the following session. The Democrats are making a determined fight for the legislature and confidence is manifested in the party ranks that the Democrats will control the next General Assembly.

HARVARD ELEVEN IN FINE FORM FOR BIG STRUGGLE WITH YALE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

WALTER CAMP TAKES TED COY'S PLACE AS YALE'S HEAD COACH

HARVARD READY FOR BIG GAMES

By E. V. B. Parke.

Yales stiff work in the way of final training was the last of the thirteen preliminaries for the Crimson gridiron warriors before the closed doors of the stadium. The men are all in pretty fine shape just now after the hard drills they have gone through this year. As any amount of hard going might bring them to total exhaustion, Coach Haughton has been using the worst condition that could befall the Crimson at the hands of the enemy during the game's drill was on Tuesday of this week, a great test.

In putting these men through their drills, Haughton has had to use a system. He has been very careful to keep the men along as well as possible, and the services of Crawford Hogsett, the trainer, the coaching staff has been able to get results till the Yale game.

Harry Kersberg, a Yale man of 1908, was also on the field during practice from the West, and is expected to help materially in the coaching during the remaining days before the game. There is no telling whether the celebrity of football will be on hand between now and the end of the week, but all is depending the big game on the fighting trim.

Leslie in Scrimmage.

Another cheering sight to the Crimson was the appearance of Leslie in the regular fullback and the mainstay of the Crimson secondary defense in the game scrimmage that took place with the 'Varsity. His injured knee seems to have entirely recovered and there is no reason why he or his taking part in the game with the Green, as he did in the Dartmouth game of the fighting for months and his services are considered by the coaches somewhat his work, after having received a weight on his knee in the Dartmouth game, while he will probably be all right for the game Saturday, the day-of-the-game days will be step back a little from the effort and play of last week.

Potter, who alternates with Wiggins worth at the guard position, is fighting hard for a place in the line-up, and it is thought that with some more days of practice he will be in shape to push Wigglesworth out in the Yale game.

In all other cases the squad is in shape with the few injured men in the list, and this is not considered by corresponding dates of former seasons, and obviously this means much in the success of the team.

One particular phase of the playing in the Harvard eleven this season is the comparatively small amount of penalties that have been inflicted upon the players. Coach Haughton has been very careful to play the game as to incur fewer penalties than in former years, and the Crimson men are responding to the coaching.

Penalties Prove Costly.

The most serious part has been that the majority of these penalties have come just when their opponents were within striking distance of the Harvard goal. Time and time again the Crimson defense has been put on its mettle by the fact that the opponents were within striking distance of the Harvard goal, and on every occasion the Harvard men have risen to the occasion and held their opponents for the final battle. Such a record during the season is a most creditable one.

With the exception of Potter and Leslie, Friedman, their regular fullback, the eleven was a very much behind those of the Stadium. The men have been in the game failing to materialize. Apparently either Friedman or Leslie, or both, had not been through very much of strain in the course of the season, but about the size of it, so that they needed continual practice to keep them in good trim, for they were keen on a pretty steady while on the field.

Therefore we have in this place at present, and in all probability the game Saturday, both Friedman and Leslie, the regular ends, Lowell and Lewis, the regular guards, Potter and Wigglesworth, and the regular tackles, Hubbard and Hall. It is a fact that they are not only the best pair of ends on the Harvard team this season, but which have guarded the wings of the Crimson eleven in the games with the opponents will surely have to go through with a good deal.

Wigglesworth has been a star on the end of the line all season, and has come through the signals accurately and passed the ball to the backfield in the old-time way. He has also made the most of his opportunities in carrying the ball, and has been the most consistent man on the team.

Hard Battle Predicted.

Even since the Massachusetts game, when down from New Hampshire laid siege to the Crimson goal, and only by the most desperate work was the Crimson forces enabled to stop the determined rush when Dartmouth got within the shadow of the goal, the Harvard men have been in the best of condition, and the large crowds that will see the game Saturday will be treated to a battle between two well-trained elevens.

The local contingent has been in the highest spirits over the prospects of victory, and this has brought to this city a large number of Harvard men who have been in the habit of seeing the game with Yale every year. Saturday's attack on Dartmouth has been developed by Princeton, and the team has been able to come with conditions as they found them.

Tiger Game Taught Lesson.

But of the same time, paradoxical as it may seem, in Princeton's defeat of Dartmouth lies the Green's hopes of beating Harvard.

If the Tiger had been annihilated by the Indian, if Dartmouth had won the Princeton game, all hope would have been lost for winning the Harvard game. In Dartmouth's defeat at New York the key to triumph today.

The Princeton game taught the men how to finish with vigor and confidence of success that they did not yet know. Another thing they were not perfect players, and that the team was not a perfect machine. In the easy game at New York would have ruined the eleven's chances for the remainder of the season.

Dartmouth will be in wonderfully better condition when she meets Harvard than when she battled Princeton. Her coaches predict by that game it was a little lesson, but a good one.

Put Up Battle of Lives.

The players of that game were soundly thrashed with vigor and confidence of success that they did not yet know. Another thing they were not perfect players, and that the team was not a perfect machine. In the easy game at New York would have ruined the eleven's chances for the remainder of the season.

Dartmouth will be in wonderfully better condition when she meets Harvard than when she battled Princeton. Her coaches predict by that game it was a little lesson, but a good one.

When They Play That Dartmouth Game — By Tad

DARTMOUTH SURE IT CAN HOLD CRIMSON

By Sid Whipple.

Dartmouth is preparing for the final contest of a season of varying fortunes and ups and downs, and the indications are that the men of the Crimson fleece to be the strongest that they have ever shown in any game. Coach Dobie says that Dartmouth is confident of victory in the game with Harvard. When the game is over, Harvard will know that they have been in a game with Dartmouth, and will know that they have been in a game with the Green.

Dartmouth's confidence is based on a proof that the team has improved to a point where it can meet Harvard on even terms. Dartmouth has been playing a steady game all season, and has been playing a steady game all season, and has been playing a steady game all season, and

SAILOR BURKE AND BILL M'KINNON MEET AT ARMORY TO-NIGHT

Mutt Commits a Serious Offense Against the Traffic Regulations — By "Bud" Fisher

NELSON SURE HE WILL WIN BACK HIS TITLE

By Battling Nelson.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—It seems almost certain now that I will have a chance to win back the lightweight title from Ad Wolgast in December.

I say win it back advisedly. I have good reason for thinking that I can do so. I do not wish to detract from the ability of the Milwaukee boy, but I think I am his master and I am only anxious to demonstrate.

My reasons for saying this are numerous. When I met Wolgast here a year ago and he won the title from me I was not the Battling Nelson of old. I had been doing a marathon across the continent for nineteen months. During that time I filled theatrical engagements in every part of the country and crossed the country ten times.

I engineered three ranches, one in California, one in New Mexico and one in Illinois. I engineered a real estate deal involving $50,000. All of this caused great mental worry, and prior to my fight with Wolgast for the championship I did not get proper rest.

I've woke up at night and tried to figure out some big deal. When I stepped into the ring I was not right, physically or mentally.

I think the fight should have been allowed to go the limit. Wolgast, despite his collapse, could not put me down or out. In my fight with Ritchie I was in far worse shape, but the referee allowed the battle to go on and I won.

I think I could have fought a hundred rounds with Wolgast and been as good as I was when Smith stopped the fight in the fortieth round. I think also that I would have won in a few rounds, for while I was some battered up I was strong and there with the knockout punch when the opportunity presented itself.

I will fight Moran before Coffroth's Club this month. I figure that if I can't whip the Englishman I have no business in the ring with Wolgast. My one aim now will be to get some lasting practice.

I am fit physically, but my long lost has interfered with my boxing, and I am a bit off on judgment of distance. The coming bout with Moran and the fight with Lagrave will serve to put me on edge, and I think I will surely win back the title.

LEWIS KNOCKS OUT NELSON IN SECOND

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—In a fight claimed to be for the welter-weight championship of the world, Harry Lewis of New York knocked out Fighting Dick Nelson here in the second round of a scheduled ten-round bout. Lewis was about fifteen pounds heavier than Nelson and was the master of the fight at every stage. The first round opened fast and then Lewis landed the first of a series of stiff lefts to the face, which finally downed his opponent. Nelson went to the floor in the last of the first round. In the second Nelson took the count twice and the third time, on the blow to the face, was counted out.

LAW TO SAVE HUNTER'S LIFE

By Dick Carpenter.

No hunting season with its attendant accidents is complete without a discussion of the old question relative to the passage of laws which would compel all hunters to wear red hats or red suits.

This year the question comes up again. In the Vermont legislature a bill by which all hunters would be compelled to wear bright red sweaters is now pending. Representative Gillett of Richmond is the author. The penalty for non-compliance is fixed at $100.

In Wisconsin last year thirty-three men were fatally shot and thirty-six injured during the hunting season. Captain G. W. Rickeman, State fish and game warden, has issued a call to all hunters to wear bright red caps and hopes that the number of accidents will be greatly reduced.

In a recently published article, Dr Heber Bishop of Boston prescribes a red sweater or red hat as a cure for buck fever. Following is his theory:

"When a man shoots a man, mistaking him for a deer in the bushes, he is in a physiological condition analogous to the palsy agitans, known to the street as 'buck fever,' and he doesn't seem to be responsible for what he does. The jaws are very stringy, especially in the State of Maine; but they should be made more so."

Guide Waldo Wilcox, one of the oldest and most experienced of all Maine's game officials, does not agree with Dr. Bishop.

"We have laws enough now," said Warden Neil. "Doesn't it stand to reason that if it is 'palsy agitans' or buck fever which a hunter has and he is not responsible, that he would have it just as bad and be just as irresponsible and shoot just as quick if he should see something with red on it.

"It has long been the contention of some of the best sportsmen among us that the true hunter does not shoot at moving game; that they refuse to shoot 'on the wing.' Their argument is that they consider he sure of killing a deer or wounding it unless the game is standing still and they refuse to take a chance of wounding an animal and having it hide in the woods to suffer for weeks and perhaps die in agony.

"But there are always men who 'will take a chance' and in view of that it would seem that some laws looking to the safety of hunters should be enacted."

14 DEER SHIPPED BY MAINE HUNTERS

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 8.—Game receipts on the morning trains were fourteen deer, all belonging to Maine hunters. The first prosecution in the local court for shooting gray squirrels came when Rocco Leo of Bangor was arrested on complaint of Game Warden Walter I. Neal. Leo was charged with shooting one squirrel and was fined $20 and costs and his gun was confiscated.

ROLLER LOSES BOUT; GETS BUT ONE FALL

Dr. Benjamin Roller was unable to throw Hialmar Lundin of Sweden twice in one hour at the Boston Arena, as he had contracted to do. The Swede showed surprisingly good form and stood Roller off for forty-four minutes, ten and one-half seconds before his shoulders finally struck the floor. In the short time that intervened before the hour was up Roller was unable to secure another fall.

SNAP YOUR GAME AND WIN A PRIZE

THE BOSTON AMERICAN will give a high grade Winchester rifle or shotgun of the latest model, manufactured by the Winchester Arms Company, for the best photogram of five game birds or big game taken before December 15 next.

For the second best picture received a camera will be awarded.

The clearness of the picture and the "action" shown will figure largely in making the awards. The names of the judges who will decide the winners will be printed within a short time.

M'KINNON MEETS BURKE TONIGHT

Frank Klauss, who was to go up against Sailor Burke, in the feature bout at the Armory A. A. tonight, passed up sick in Boston this morning. He had a fever but came over from New York, he said, to have a physical examination so as to prove that he was on the square. He convinced those who looked at him at the Armory A. A.

Klauss had sent word in advance that he might not be able to fight tonight, the management of the club got in communication with Bill McKinnon and he agreed to go on with Burke. So he has been substituted for Klauss on to-night's card. McKinnon met Burke at the Armory A. A. and got the decision over the sailor.

Three good bouts of six rounds each, take place in addition to the main bout. Joe Egan of the South End meets the new star from Woburn, Young McGovern. Freddie Maguire of Lowell and Tom Flanagan of Cambridge face one another while Billy Burke of South Boston and Johnny Cardinal of Chelsea will try and figure out which is the better boxer.

The entries for the amateur show November 11, close to-morrow, with E. F. Welsh, 541 Tremont street, Boston. There will be three special bouts, and 105, 115 and 125 pound classes.

591 ENTRIES FOR EMERYVILLE MEET

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—The entries to stakes in the New California Jockey Club, under the auspices of which the California racing season opens at Emeryville track next Saturday, have been announced. There are 591 nominations, making an approximate average of 8½ to each of the twelve events. Many of the leading turfmen of the United States have made nominations. There are twenty-six entries for the opening handicap of November 12.

DE CRO WINS BOTH

Alfredo De Oro opened his two weeks' engagement at Mink Murray's White Bear by defeating Young Rose at pool by 25 to 50, and by 125 to 81.

Frank Jones will play Mr. De Oro this afternoon and John T. McHale, champion of New England, will oppose the wonderful Cuban in the evening game.

LYNCH SETTLES BIG LEAGUE ROW

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—President Tenek of the National League displayed a fine degree of diplomacy today in the settlement of the row existing between President Herrmann of the Cincinnati club and Horace Fogel of the Philadelphia club.

This row, it will be remembered, threatened to disrupt the National League at its annual meeting here in December, is to be settled by arbitration. Lynch himself will act as referee and the meeting will in all probability be held at the National League headquarters toward the close of the week. Both Herrmann and Fogel have notified the National League executive that they are subject to his call any time after today.

Fogel appears to be weakening in his antagonistic attitude toward the chairman of the local baseball commission. Before quitting New Orleans he declared he was perfectly willing to carry through the deal provided Mr. Herrmann paid him a cash sum to boot. Tonight, however, that the deal, in some form, will have to be gone through with in order to maintain harmony in both clubs concerned.

Herrmann is bound to get the two players from Philadelphia for the four men in the trade. He still maintains he has nothing to show that Fogel tried to back out of the deal which he himself proposed.

Lynch, presumably, had the release of Beebe, Rowan, Lobert and Paskert in the Philadelphia club, as well as that of Dooin, nothing whatever as to Lynch's attitude in the matter. As Lynch himself said:

"It is the duty of the National League to execute the ballots all such releases sent him by the club president."

CUTLER CALLS OUT HARVARD OARSMEN

Captain Cutler of the Harvard varsity crew has sent out a call for men to participate in the graded crew races which will be held on November 16, candidates reporting at the boat house for daily work. As no men have been taken to the varsity squad from the ranks of the second intercollegiate races, it is aimed to make the graded race a trysting for prospective material for the varsity squad next spring, and in addition to the races will form a material development in the possible varsity eights, men who may be discovered by the race.

CHARLIE HARVEY TOO SPEEDY FOR CARROLL

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Charlie Harvey of Chicago was the victor in a long round go over Jimmie Carrol of San Francisco, at Carroll's benefit here tonight. Carroll did not live up to his reputation. Harvey was smaller than anticipated, but had no difficulty in handling Carroll all over the ring at will. Harvey's work was clever and snappy. His most dangerous punch was a right hook to the jaw, which he landed with the left to the jaw. Carroll couldn't get started. Harvey was the master at all times and Carroll a match for Harvey.

SMITH KNOCKED OUT, BUT GETS DECISION

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Johnny Bedell refused to go on with Battling Hurley at the Marathon A. C. because there was not enough money in the house. Billy Jack Smith was substituted. Smith had the better of Lucky Eddie Wolfe in the fourth round, when Hurley put one over on his left eye and knocked him out. He was out for more than half an hour and it was necessary to call in a doctor, who had some trouble in bringing the man back to consciousness. The referee declared Smith the winner on a foul.

PICKS GREEN TEAM

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 8.—Coach Harry Holman of the cross country team has picked the following men to run at the intercollegiate cross country run next Saturday: J. W. Neyes, Captain, 1911; R. L. Men Can Now Buy The Best Known Clothes ON CREDIT And Pay $1 A Week

This is a most remarkable advancement in the credit business.

By our credit arrangements you can now purchase on credit at cash prices the recognized standard brands of high-class clothing, such as Strouse & Bros. High Art Clothes, of Baltimore, the finest clothes made in America; Fashion Clothes of Rochester, the acme of original fashions; the Frankel System Clothes of New York, the very best medium-priced line in the market to-day; the Character Clothes of New York, strictly union made, and other equally reputable lines.

Our Clothes Guaranteed to Give Good Service or a New Garment Free

A man buying on credit is no longer compelled to accept the unknown and inferior clothes sold to the ordinary credit house, clothes that have always been cheap and sold at exorbitant prices. We do not conduct our credit business along old lines, and we do not handle the brands of any manufacturer who has not a national reputation. The brand must be well established in this community before we offer it to our customers.

Do not forget our FAMOUS ORDER CHECK, accepted as money at the big cash department and specialty stores. Do not confound this with ordinary credit purchasing. It is no longer necessary to pay the exorbitant prices charged by other credit houses.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

A Law Unto Herself—by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner, Great Britain rights reserved.

THERE was a man it was said one time,
Who went astray in his youthful prime.
Can the brain keep cool and the heart keep quiet
When the blood like a river is running riot?
And boys will be boys, the old folks say,
And the man is the better who's had his day.

The sinner repented and the preacher told
Of the prodigal son who came back to the fold;
And Christian people threw open the door
With a warmer welcome than ever before.
Wealth and honor were his to command
And a spotless woman gave him her hand.

And the world strewed their pathway with blossoms aboom,
Crying "God bless lady and God bless groom."

There was a maiden who went astray
In the golden dawn of her life's young day.
She had more passion and heart than head,
And she followed blindly where fond Love led.
And Love is ever a dangerous guide
To wander at will by a young girl's side.

The woman repented and turned from sin,
But no door opened to let her in.
The preacher prayed that she might be forgiven,
But told her to look for mercy—in heaven.
For this is the law of the world we know—
That the woman is stoned, while the man may go.

A brave man wedded her after all,
But the world said, frowning, "We shall not call."

A YOUNG woman declared she had a moral right to be "a law unto her self", that it was not the business of society to make rules for her to follow. She believed each soul must find its own path in life, and seek its development in its own way.

That is quite true, but there are certain laws of life which, if violated, bring unhappiness and misery, as surely as physical disease follows the swallowing of some poisonous substance. One of these laws is the propensity of man to tire of a woman who has broken a moral principle for his sake.

The young woman became "a law unto her self," and took up her abode with a married man who left his wife on the plea that she was not congenial. He could not obtain a divorce, as the two were "laws unto themselves."

After ten years had passed by the pair was encountered by the wife. She asked the man to choose between them.

He chose the wife; he said she was able to keep up the dignity of his position" better than the unfortunate victim of his passing passion. Then the husband and wife proceeded to force an immediate departure of the foolish young woman, whose position should have awakened their sympathy and compassion at least.

But humiliation and misery of one kind or another usually are the lot of the woman who becomes "a law unto herself."

Everything of material value may be hers for a time, and the man's heart may seem to be wholly hers, yet as time flies, lawless and hidden passion seeks a free exit.

No more unfounded ideas ever gained hold upon the minds of the inexperienced than that foolish theory prevalent in French literature, that man remains more loyal to the woman to whom he is not legally tied than to a wife. Once in a thousand cases such may be the fact. All the other 999 women who have loved unwisely find the lover seeking some excuse sooner or later to end the association which has become irksome. Like the husband referred to, he prefers the comradeship of the uncongenial wife when put to the test, because she is the wife, to that of the more pleasing woman, for whom he must abandon respectable society.

A man who will be untrue to a wife who trusts him, and for whom he will wrong a girl who loves him by compromising her for life, will, in the natural course of events, be disloyal to her and weary of his relations with her.

He is like a watch with something the matter with the mainspring. He cannot long run true.

To be "a law unto one's self" in religious faith, or in methods of business, or in dress, or in politics, is all very well. But when this self-formulated code of laws drags others along with it, willy nilly, we must question its right of procedure.

A married man ought to ask himself if he has the right to place his wife in a position of humiliation, and to jeopardize the name of another woman before he proceeds to make laws for himself.

A woman who thinks she is privileged to follow her own laws of conduct in these matters should face the possibility of bringing nameless children into the world who will have a right to challenge her claim of a privileged character in being "a law unto herself." Meanwhile the wife who makes a triumphant exit from a tragic situation, carrying the prodigal husband off as trophy, ought to think of the desperate situation of the girl he leaves behind him, and soften her heart toward her erring rival.

The victor can always afford to be generous. The woman who has won can afford to be kind to the loser; and she who has mastered can well stoop to wipe away the fears of the sinner.

Think twice, young woman, before you become "a law unto yourself."

The man who tries to make his own moral laws, has an easier time when he attempts to return to the arms of society than the woman. It has been the way of the world since society was organized, and will continue to be the way of the world for centuries to come.

Letters of a Bride

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Fernleigh.

Dearest of Mumsies:

THANKS for your sweet letter.

I know, dear, just exactly what you mean when you remind me of my love of making people like me, only you called it flirting, you naughty Mumsie.

But I did not flirt with Mr. Stanley. I would not do such a thing ever that I am a married woman. I simply made myself agreeable to him as I would to any man who happened to sit next me at dinner.

Bobby ought to trust me. I would not dream of being jealous if he sat next an attractive girl at dinner and seemed to be enjoying himself.

When we were married we talked this sort of thing all over and agreed that we would never be silly enough to doubt each other, and I for one mean to live up to it. I shall never curtail my husband's any normal pleasure.

We are invited to the Greys for the week-end. It will be great fun, I think, as we will be a large party of congenial people. Bobby and I will motor over.

Jealous of "the Club."

So Jod did belong to several clubs when you were married and you did not mind his going to them. Well, Mumsie, of course I don't mind now, but I have come to the club only one night last week, he had to stay in town for dinner and then he went to the club and did not get home until 1:30 A. M.

I was all alone, and I am afraid I was a little cross when he got home. It was the first time he had gone out alone since we were married, but I thought that he would be satisfied with me and not care for the club so much, at least.

I am looking forward so to going home next week. A real dinner party. Mary at Thanksgiving. You see I still think and Norah and I are so excited over the coming of the dear old place at home. I have so much to tell you darling.

I love my house so, and Mary says I am getting to be a splendid housekeeper. Doesn't that make you proud of your "tomping girl"?

Of course, Bobby, the angel, thinks everything I do perfect, he really is spoiling me dreadfully. He makes no break fast in bed, because he has to take the 8:30 train to town, and you know how I have always been a sleepyhead in the mornings.

Mother-in-Law

What a beautiful thing it is, Mumsie, when a girl and her mother are the friends that you and I have always been. It is such a comfort to know that I can tell you everything and feel so sure of your sympathy and understanding.

I had luncheon with Mrs. Caton yesterday. I wish I did not feel half afraid of her. I try to get on well with her, because she is Bobby's mother, and he loves her, but she is not one bit easy to love like a certain precious Mumsie I know.

I know she thinks me frivolous and not half good enough for her son.

As for Bobby's sister, Charlotte, she is so astonishingly "fast" that I cannot decide right in letting her feel that I know him feel better than she does, and that I know makes her jealous. She adores him so.

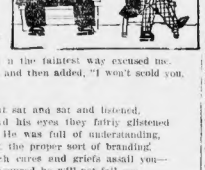
Perhaps it's changing Mumsie, but a wife comes first, which fact Miss Charlotte seems to forget or ignore.

Now, it's time for Bobby's train, so good-by, dearest, with heaps of love for both of you.

Your loving daughter,
PEGGY CATON.

P. S.—I forgot to tell you something most important. I'm going to give a dinner next week. A real dinner party. Mary at Thanksgiving. You see I still think and Norah and I are so excited over it.

How to Get Relief---By Kennett Harris



I HAD a heap of trouble and my breast was fairly loaded,
For it galled me and it stung me and it rankled and corroded
Like a man I tried to bear it and I didn't bleat or bellow,
But I yearned to speak about it to some sympathetic fellow.
So I sought out an acquaintance and in him I then confided,
But that very brutal person all my misery derided.
He observed, "Great Scott! old fellow. Well, they certainly did con you.
It's a good joke on you."

So I turned away and left him. I was angry and disgusted.
And I saw a friend—a close one—whom I fondly loved and trusted.
I informed him what had happened, but he gave no indication
Of his sorrow—if he felt it—and no word of consolation.

But he called me "chump" and "bone head." He most cruelly abused me.
And my wife, who sat and listened, in the faintest way excused me.
She remarked, "He knew no better," and then added, "I won't scold you.
But you know I told you!"

But I found a total stranger who just sat and sat and listened,
And his voice was soft and cooing and his eyes they fairly glistened
He had naught of scorn or censure, He was full of understanding,
And the people who had done me got the proper sort of branding.
I advise you to likewise when such cures and griefs assail you—
Go and see some total stranger—he assured he will not fail you.
Though you travel miles to see him, you will not regret the journey—
See a good attorney.

Why They Married

By DOROTHY DIX

The Man Who Was Afraid to Break Away

"THE real reason that I married," said the first man, "was because I was a coward. I was afraid of a settled condition.

"This is an unpleasant and a ridiculous thing to say, but this is a confessional in which we have not promised to tell the exact truth. This is my excuse.

"Betty and I grew up in a little town together. She was the prettiest sort of a village maiden with rosy cheeks, and crisp curling brown hair, and a saucy way of talking that captured my youthful fancy.

"I lived on the path that led to and from school, and spent my pocket change on caramels and chewing gum for her, and there grew up a really strong attachment between us that, in my unutmost ignorance, I supposed was love.

"After I quit school I went into the village bank, and I still beaued Betty around to church and the church suppers and parties, but everything was in statu quo, so to speak. There was no engagement between us, but I suppose both of us had a vague idea that we cherished a deathless passion for each other and that some day we would get married.

The Crisis

"Then came an offer to me of an assistant cashiership in a big bank in the city, and that, curiously enough, had the effect of precipitating a crisis in my affairs. I had as well as endless life for it was the strength of the sentiment aroused in me at the thought of leaving my old home, my old friends and not vividly that made me make my fatal matrimonial mistake.

"I remember it all as if it had happened only yesterday. I was ambitious, and I was elated over the prospect of success that had suddenly opened up before me. I had that exquisite thrill, dear to all of power, that comes to a man when he feels in his hand the weapon that he knows is to hew his way and triumph for him, and knows that at last he has really begun to fight his battle, and that the victory is sure.

"I was glad to go, and yet my heart overflowed with tenderness for all that I was leaving behind. My mother and father, my sisters and my brothers had never seemed so dear. The old home had never seemed such a nest as it did when I was leaving it. People whom I had outgrown became suddenly interesting, and picturesque, and those I had loved for daily greetings with the village postmaster, on that I learned to hate the very sight of, came regularly every day. When I did write, I sent her curt, cold notes, but her replies came back brimming over with forgiving love that nothing could hurt.

The Denouement

"Every year when I went back to the village for my family still lived there—I put off my annual visit the idea of marrying Betty was more and more distasteful to me. Every year she bored me more and seemed to be more tiresome and dull, and at last, in sheer desperation, I plucked up the courage to tell her that I did not love her as I once had, and that I did not think we would be happy together.

"The reply she threw herself upon my breast and hung frantically weeping, clinging there and begging me not to forsake her. She reminded me of how long she had waited for me, of how she had given up other chances of marriage that she might have had for me, and she repeated over and over again that she asked so little, just a little affection, just to be near me, and protested that she knew that the old love would come back if we were together.

"And I was a coward. I was too weak to break away from the hands that tried to hold me. I couldn't take my happiness at the price of hers, and so we were married within a month.

"By George," said one of the other men, under his breath, "it does take a lot of courage—it takes a brute—to tell a woman who loves him that he doesn't love her any more."

"It's the reason that many a man is married," said the third man, cynically.

The Proposal

"In this exalted frame of mind I went to a Farwell party that my old girl and boy chums gave me. Betsy was there looking like a peach in a pink muslin. We danced many together, and at last we strolled out into the moonlight, and with music pouring on the air and no one around having time for thought we could, I asked her to be my wife—to wait for me until I could make my fortune and come back for her.

"It was a moment of emotional insanity, but in it I settled my fate, and I went away, a boy of twenty, head, fettered, with a halter about my neck.

"Of course, I didn't realize what I had done. I honestly though myself very much in love with Betty and kept her photograph on my desk, and for months I wrote long letters in which I told her how I was counting the hours until I could come back to her. That was for the first few months.

"Then I began to get acquainted in the city. My family had good city connections, and it was not long before I was being asked about and meeting city girls, beautiful, cultured, clever, gracious and other women, women who had touched life at many points and knew all why were wise and tolerant, and broad.

"I had not known that there were such women, and they were held aspect to meet them. Theirs was the cosmopolitan air which I had vaguely dreamed as the most delightful thing on earth.

The Awakening

"That Summer I went on a home to see Betty, and I could never forget the shock of that first meeting. It seemed to me that she had grown fatty in my absence. Her pretty face had grown coarse and provincial to me. Her clothes seemed ill-fitting and out of taste. Her voice sounded strident. She did not know what to do with her feet and her hands, how to sit nor how to walk, and oh, the dreary dullness of her conversation after we had threshed over the village gossip. Within a week I realized that her mind was narrow and prejudiced.

"Then it came over me with a sudden shock that I had changed, that I had outgrown her, that we were different as to ground, that we ought not to marry, that we should not have anything really in common, but I was bound to carry through toward me about her, and told me how faithful she had been to me. It was like taking the last straw away from a drowning man.

"I lacked the courage to tell her outright that I could not marry her and that what ever little love I had for her to begin with had burnt itself out, so I feigned that I was summoned back to my work and before my vacation was half over.

"Then I tried to kill her affection by neglect. I left her letters unanswered, but it made no difference. She great, thick, dark, beautiful eyes would look at me with a pitiful reproach that I could not endure, and I would write her a letter that would bring a rapturous response.

"I was a coward, and I knew it, but I was afraid of myself, afraid of the future, afraid of the world, afraid of the opinion of my friends, afraid of the gossip of the village, afraid of the pain I would cause Betty, and I married her.

"I have been married for ten years, and I have been miserable for nine and a half of them. I have had to pay the penalty of my cowardice, and I have had to see Betty pay it, too, for she knows that I do not love her, and that I have never loved her, and that I married her because I was afraid to tell her the truth."

Daysey Mayme's Ideas

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

DAISEY MAYME APPLETON had particularly enjoyed the reading of a paper on Justice for Women at a meeting of the Sunrise Uplift Club, and was gathering up her manuscript with the happy consciousness of a deed well done, when she caught sight of a widow's veil in the audience, deliberately brushed aside her manuscript and, leaning forward, said impressively:

"I do not wish to digress, but I feel that I cannot leave my Suffering Sisterhood struggling for life, liberty and happiness without asking if there is any one here who has ever heard of my Cousin Jane?"

There was no response, and, fixing an accusing eye on the emblem of widowhood in the audience, Daysey Mayme continued:

"The time is coming when we will regulate matters on the MAN at the polls, but I wish to ask what good that will do us when the ballots offers us no relief from the widow who has begun to take notice? Do you hear, my suffering sisters—The Widow Who Has Begun To Take Notice?

"Now, there is my Cousin Jane. When Cousin Jane made a final decision among the five or six men she was angling at her feet, and married one of them, the others promptly retired to other hunting grounds and prepared to forget her, and in the brief period of her married life there wasn't one bachelor left unsecured.

"They formed other friendships, engaged in other pursuits, and when, after the brief experience that began with orange blossoms and ended with Rolleigh life insurance, she emerged, wearing heavy crepe, she found scarcely a single eligible left in girls; others were on the ardorous verge; others were happily married, and still others, having outgrown the sentimental period, were absorbed in business, having entirely forgotten her.

"Do you suppose she was glad they had forgotten their disappointment and were contented that their lives were to go on without her? Never! When she heard of a former lover's marriage, she threw back that widow's veil and was told of the engagement of another, she cut off three inches, and when she learned that three former lovers were on the delirious verge, and others had forgotten that woman existed, she took off that veil entirely, put violets on her hat, powder on her nose and rouged the particles of light left.

"What weapon has a woman against a widow who expects former lovers to drop every tie, and begin with her just where her marriage made them leave off?

"What protection has a weak man against a widow who takes her heart out of cold storage and demands that he warm it; who, with the added grace of a understanding of men which her brief widowhood has given her, enters the field with a sentimental appeal to the bear Past? She may still be riding her horse on the cemetery, so far as her dead husband concerned, but she understands that all her former lovers take turns riding in the carriage with her, every Sunday, encouraging her, and advising her.

"I repeat, Suffering Sisterhood, we can take Mere Man to the polls, but what are we going to do about the doing widow?"

Then Daysey Mayme bowed and fluttered to her seat.

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

L. E. H.: I don't quite understand what you mean when you say you "do not want to resort to artificial means to preserve your complexion." Surely you can have no reasonable objection to using a good qualified powder to help keep your skin clear and even. I will give you a recipe for a remedy that works in a perfectly natural way, for it clears the scalp pores, strengthens and gives new life to the hair roots because the way is cleared for healthy growth, but from your daughter one ounce of alcohol, dissolve it in one-half pint of water, then take into the scalp two or three times a week, and it will prevent forming of scale and dandruff and stop your hair from falling out. It is just fine for excessively oily hair. It refreshes and invigorates the scalp, livens up dull and brittle hair, restores natural color, and encourages long, thick, abundant and glossy growth.

P. C.: In your quest for beauty you could use all the complexion powders, creams and lotions on the market, but you will never have a smooth and beautiful complexion as long as you are troubled with constipation, poor appetite and a sluggish liver. What you really need is a good, cleansing, system tonic to purify your blood, give you an appetite and clear your skin of these pimples, sores and liver blotches. Take before each meal a tablespoonful of a tonic made by dissolving one-half cup of sugar and one ounce kardene in one-half pint water, then add enough hot water to make a pint. This is an inexpensive tonic that has done wonders for many of my friends in improving them to good health and good looks.

A. E.: Yes, eye-glasses give any girl that appearance of looking older than she really is. Do not wear them until you need them. Bathe your eyes from your druggist, take it home and dissolve it in a pint of water and you will have an eye wash that will relieve redness, soreness and inflammation. Use one or two drops in each eye whenever your eyes feel tired, weak or sore. This tonic strengthens weak sight and makes the eyes clear and bright.

Patience: Your complexion will become clear, soft and refined—the admiration of all who see you, or know you, if you will follow my advice. Pay strict attention to exercise. Massaging with cinnogen cream, jelly is the best blood renover and tissue builder I know of. You can get from your druggist one ounce of cinnogen, dissolve it in a half-pint of cold water, and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, stir well and you have enough for a few months' use. Cinnogen cream as a massage cream and the cinnogen tonic as a face lotion is the application which much is clearing the complexion of pimples, blackheads and blotches. Almond meal is almost second belief. Almonds make the flesh firm and fair and the skin soft and satiny.

A. S.: Yes have my sympathy. I can imagine how embarrassed you feel when you think they don't you try Ardsmo for mustache? Wild hairs? I have never to remove those. Just mix a little of the powder with a little water, so as to make a paste. Apply to the surface from which you wish to remove the hairs, let remain for two minutes, then wipe off the paste and wash the skin with water with starch water. Delatone is rather expensive for one ounce druggist can get it for one ounce, but it is much cheaper than electrolysis. Repeat the application of delatone if the hairs should return. Why don't you get rid of those eyebrow hairs? Use until they finally go for good. Mix the paste fresh for each application.

Virginia: If you are so "thin and scrawny" as you say, a good, careful, scientific treatment will be of any benefit to you. Don't be afraid to put plump, ripe flesh upon your bones. I have proved by experience that the cheapest and best way to build up tissue and flesh, because they are the quickest and surest to enrich the blood, and act as a tonic upon the nervous system, is to eat plenty of raw onions. A very dear friend of mine, who was frail and thin, added twenty pounds to her weight in one month. Kargelene compound tablets can be purchased in almost any drug store; a dollar's worth (50 tablets) is a considerable for a week's treatment. These tablets contain no harmful ingredients.

Mrs. J.: Very few of the so-called "egg-shampoos" contain eggs in any appreciable quantity, although with eggs is a rather difficult and "messy" undertaking, which don't you use Packard's Shampoo? This pure shampoo will be a pleasure instead of a torture. Simply dissolve a teaspoonful of it in a cup of hot water, pour a little on the head at a time, rub well into the scalp and hair, then rinse your hair scalp and hair in the clean water and you have a delightful shampoo of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, leaves the hair soft and glossy and fluffy. It will not fade the hair, make it dry or brittle, or cause it to streak, like some soaps do. After a sunburst shampoo, your hair is clear golden, and if dry and dull and bright so that you can dress it quickly and neatly.

S. Yes, I know what the sun and wind have been doing to your complexion. Use the beauty lotion that I have given so many times already. Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in a half-pint of hot water, and rose water, sufficient to make the full pint. Apply to the face, neck and forearms with the palm of the hand, rubbing gently until dry. Spurmax refreshes, cools and whitens the skin. It removes freckles, tan, redness, sallowness, chapping and cracking of the skin, and is fine for sunburn and wind. Use it daily instead of face powder. Use it before if you don't rub off or show like powder.

Mrs. K. C.: You should begin taking a good, safe, reconstructing remedy at once, as the condition is far too rundown to take an extra flesh during the winter months. By dissolving four ounces of sargrain in 1½ pints hot water and taking a tablespoonful before each meal you will restore your excess flesh rapidly without any ill effects and have a more shapely figure. This remedy is harmless and has proven a wonderful source of relief to many, many ladies who were troubled with over-fatness.

THE evening meal is the most important meal of the day.

Important for pleasure; for nourishment; and to promote restful sleep and a clear head for tomorrow.

You can hardly do better than begin this important repast with one of

Campbell's SOUPS

Particularly when you are very tired and "done up" you will find a plate of Campbell's Ox Tail or Mock Turtle or Beef Soup extremely refreshing and satisfying. In fact, you could easily make one of these palatable wholesome soups the mainstay of your entire meal on occasion. And you would feel all the better and stronger for it the next day.

Desperate Desmond

At last Claude Belaire has got that double dyed villain, Desperate Desmond, just where he wants him. Our noble hero is taking no chances, however, he'll keep Desmond tied up in the cave with those cord's profiting by the mishap. But Desmond does not intend to go to jail, which will be in a few minutes, provided, of course, that nothing happens.

Something has happened, but it doesn't amount to much; merely a wheel off the ice cream wagon. That's easily mended, and there doesn't seem to be any possibility of Desmond's escaping by the mishap. But nay, this particular elephant is not going to allow the parade to be held up by a couple of disks of steel beams, even if it does spoil Claude's plans.

The elephant, dear readers, is trained against the burdens, and not only that, but it loves to work—and yet they call it an intelligent beast. Be that as it may, this particular elephant is not going to allow the parade to be held up by a couple of disks of steel beams, even if it does spoil Claude's plans.

Desmond doesn't exactly particularize about joining the circus, but he'd rather do hook attached to one of the beams, and that has no jail. Besides, he hasn't any choice in the matter. In the circus line, Claude is fully determined to take the elephant, and the parade has passed by, and if the hook should happen to slip and fall there would be the chain to break, there is nothing Desmond, a will appear without fail in the next

Claude's little plan would have worked out in great shape, only that foolish elephant let me. When it comes a big-set war between an elephant and donkey engine, something's got to b it was the chain that broke, there is nothing Desmond, a will appear without fail in the next

BRILLIANT PERFORMANCE OPENS SECOND OPERA SEASON

"Mefistofele" a Triumph for Mr. Russell's Reorganized Company

SIBIRIAKOFF, LASSALLE AND CARMEN MELIS MAKE THEIR BOSTON DEBUT WITH SUCCESS.

By FREDERICK JOHNS

"I

OPERA WELL CHOSEN.

BETTER COMPANY THIS YEAR.

Sibiriakoff Nearly Ideal.

"Mefistofele" was selected for the opening performance for several reasons, one of which was to introduce Leon Sibiriakoff in a role worthy of him. He has of the Bolto opera is the devil. The opera is diabolical in its whole idea; its themes are big and coarse and sensual, all is so adroitly allied to the devilish, centric figure. The redemption of Faust is merely a sop to the sentimental Italians who hated to think that a good fellow like Faust, who had enjoyed himself so completely, should have to pay for his fun.

The opera was produced last year in Boston with Marcoux in the title role. That artist is a splendid large and sang excellently, but he was physically too small to realize the part.

Sibiriakoff is a giant. Beside him Lassalle, who is no puny, looks like a little boy. He is imposing of figure. He has a voice like the trumpet that blew down Jericho. It is tremendous, it rumbles like thunder. The eight double basses of the orchestra combined cannot give out a note that would drown the Russian's roar.

He is a fine actor. He is magnificent in his destiny. None of the sly, sneaky little kind of wickedness for him. He is a fiend and he doesn't care who knows it. He would look more devilish to Bostonians

BOSTON SOCIETY IN REGAL ARRAY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Mrs. French Vanderbilt, who is the guest of the Lars Anderson at their estate in Brookline, and who was with them in their box, last night, was one of the shining lights and all during the intermissions was surrounded by her many admirers whether she remained in the box or promenaded through the foyer. Her gown was of gold brocaded violet satin and a coronet of diamonds crowned her pretty coiffure. Miss Mary Sturges Ames, also was in the party some of the time and was in blue satin trimmed with silver and pearls. Mrs. Anderson wore pale pink satin and diamonds.

Among the other notables grouped around there were Mrs. Stephen Hartlett in white satin trimmed with crystals; Miss Char

Mrs. Eben S. Draper was in yellow satin and toldered in pinks, with pearls, and Miss Dorothy Draper was in white satin with court train.

"SECRET SERVICE" REVIVAL THRILLS BOSTON AUDIENCE

Gillette and Company Atone for Sins of Historical Playwriting

MARION ABBOTT AS COLORED MAMMY AND MISS BROWN AND MISS RUTTER CHARM.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The historic drama which has been rushed forward from time to time has given us many sad and weary evenings. It has often lead us up dark alleys of disappointment and left us like lost children in the wilderness. Too often the historical drama has been a bitter libel on particular events that have helped the world move forward.

But now and then atonement is found, and you make the most of it. William Gillette has given many reasons why the history of our country belongs in the American drama—he began supplying these seasons ago, when he wrote "Secret Service" and "Held by the Enemy." We needed plays that did not stop short in the speeches of the actors, and Mr. Gillette graciously permitted them to flow from his pen.

GREET GILLETTE IN "SECRET SERVICE."

It was a rare delight to go back to "Secret Service" with Mr. Gillette at the Hollis Street Theatre last night and listen once more to the distant guns that were echoing the doom of Richmond, while Mr. Gillette and his excellent company discharged high-class dramatics and pistol-torpedoes within the tottering city.

The great drama of the Civil War may not have been written, but Mr. Gillette made a dangerously close approach to the goal with "Secret Service." He turned a stern incident of the great rebellion into a play that was entertaining, forceful in the grasp of his audience. Melodrama—of course—but it was melodrama of surprising, hysterical stage tact made you long for an side seat from the wings.

Powerful Effect.

The almost bloodless war drama went straight across the footlights with a precision that was like an army of its gripping power in the days succeeding that when Mr. Gillette was in his early years of his success. "Secret Service" was easy going for its author and actor during the period when the war play was the popular thing in dramatic entertainment, but no audience of the past could have taken either Mr. Gillette or his play in a more friendly spirit than was shown at the Hollis last night.

The years have seasoned Mr. Gillette and added his captain Thorpe of scant of his youthful exterior, but they have not taken from the actor his ability to play

AT OTHER BOSTON THEATRES.

Castle Square.

The revival of Shakespeare's "Richard III." at the Castle Square Theatre this week is one of the most carefully prepared presentations of the great dramatist ever given by a stock company in this city. The stage setting is admirable in the selection of the scenes and the setting of the play is smooth and well balanced. The play resembles a pageant. Several following those like a crowd of historic appointments are excellent, the costumes correct, the battle scenes and the supernatural elements made effective by the use of electricity.

Mr. Craig scores a distinct success in the portrayal of Richard. He makes him a villain, but a villain with consummate finesse, crafty, cunning, cruel and consumed by envious and ambition, the Richard as acted by Mr. Craig is not likely to be won undoing. There is no crudeness in the portrayal. Mr. Craig has the character well in hand throughout the play. The battle scene is managed well and proves effective.

Mr. Hustell makes a pleasing Earl of Richmond and Marie Curtis loses none of the possibilities in the character of Queen Elizabeth. Gertrude Shirley as Lady Anne and Mabel Colcord as the Duchess of York are also satisfactory.

Keith's.

Headliners would be hard to pick out of the bill at Keith's Theatre, simply because there are several performances of splendid acts, any one of which could be selected as a headliner, those of Nora Bayes, Nat Wills, Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Bernard, Ryan and Richfield, Clarence Harvey and company, Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven and company, Ethel Green and company, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGowan and company, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tinney, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bush

RECORDS GO IN ATLANTA MEET

By J. C. KERRISON.

There should be some wonderful road racing on the Savannah course on Friday and Saturday of this week, no less than twenty-three cars being entered for the grand prize race on Saturday and sixteen for the light car race on Friday, making a total of thirty-nine cars that will compete. With the acknowledgement by the drivers that the Savannah course is the fastest and speediest in the world, it is anticipated that the world's record will be surpassed. The record being held by the Florio Cup contest with an average 74.5 miles per hour.

Owing to the holding of the southern Atlanta tourney, it was necessary for several of the cars to get to the course before this afternoon, a special freight train having been secured to transport the cars from Atlanta to Savannah.

The latest entrant in the grand prize race is that of the Mercedes people, which is understood will be driven by Louis Chevrolet, who was badly injured in the year's Vanderbilt.

The officials of the Savannah Automobile Association are endeavoring to bring about an arrangement whereby the cars that shall have participated in the contest committee of the Automobile Club of America which is in Savannah on the matter under discussion, shall receive rights for the big race second entrances indeed, and those who take advantage of the practice days will not have to have their record all to be created.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Massachusetts Highway Association will be held at the City Club, No. 9 Beacon street, Boston, at 8 p. m. Thursday next, tender to Professor Arthur H. Blanchard, consulting highway engineer, Brown University, Providence, R. I., who has spent nearly six months of the past year in studying the methods of constructing and maintaining roads in the countries of Europe, will address the members on "Road Construction and Maintenance of Existing Roads." The address will be illustrated by the stereopticon.

Mr. Louis K. Rourke, Superintendent of Streets and Acting City Engineer of Boston, will also speak to the members relative to the work done under his direction in the construction of the Panama canal and the problems to be solved by the state highway commission and the administration of the Boston Society of City Engineers have been invited to attend the meeting.

Certain things are particular reasons for it, I believe that no car runs better on a shilling's worth of gasoline than one of a similar size. I know that I can drive mine when I get it, and I can slowly or else I might when the state are rising the car seems to get differently from its ordinary behavior. I have found either on the dampness, flying by my face and reflecting from the white poles of running the car, as you feel it in the wind, but I have worked and driven in the dark and I have never felt relieved. I am sure that I could actually notice Belle Eisele and Bert Dingley in the dark.

They all to easily without the least trace.

WOMEN WATCHERS AT POLLS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Miss Marie Louise Carroll, daughter of the late Mayor Augustus Carroll, who died of the strain of watching the polls on election day, is one of the practical politicians today by using through election duties as a member of the corps of polling place in the Twelfth assembly district, the home district of Timothy Sullivan, leader of Tammany Hall. Mrs. Carroll, Miss Elizabeth Hall, Miss Josephine Hall, Miss Fay, de League, spent the day at the polling place in the district. They had many controversies with the election judges, watchers and workers. Mrs. Belmont, who, with Mrs. Charles Mackay, furnished one of the motor cars for the equipment of women watchers, spent the greater part of the morning at the headquarters of the wing of the suffragettes in the Hotel Normandie. Mrs. Belmont is one of the orders-in-chief of the cause was at No. 11 Bowery.

MISSOURI LABOR MEN CUT FRANCIS HEAVILY

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 8.—Early balloting in the city and county indicates that labor will play a considerable role in their history. Democrats in the principal wards of St. Louis are losing votes to the Republican candidates against the possibility of labor's vote being cast solidly for Democratic candidates. Democratic leaders are trying to counteract this movement by appeals to labor to vote for Democratic candidates, but they are not meeting with much success. Democratic leaders are also trying to get labor to vote for Democratic candidates, but they are not meeting with much success. Democratic leaders are also trying to get labor to vote for Democratic candidates, but they are not meeting with much success.

NEBRASKA POLLS HEAVY.

OMAHA, Nov. 8.—A heavy vote was polled here today, and the indications are that the total will be the largest in the history of the city. The vote is expected to reach 100,000. The Democrats are confident of carrying the city by a large majority.

ELMORE STORY A FRAME-UP?

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Starch for Belle Elmore, for whom murder Dr. Harvey Hawley Crippen is under sentence to be hanged November 23 and who was reported to have married Crippen's fellow cabin passenger, Miss Leneve, while awaiting her execution, is wanted to-day near Hammond, Ind. A warrant was sent to the Virginia Hotel in Hammond on a plea that she had failed to pay her board bill.

Miss Elmore was a chorus girl when she married Hawley Crippen, a quiet, unassuming man who was considerably her senior. Crippen's friends declare that the marriage was a frame-up to create the impression that Crippen was innocent of the murder of

NEW SUMMER HOME IS LEASED BY TAFT

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 8.—President Taft, on his way to Cincinnati to-day announced that he had decided to pass two more Summers at Beverly, Mass., and that he had signed a two years' lease of the Peabody house at that place. This house is about two miles from the Beverly depot. It is not on the ocean front as was the cottage Mr. Taft occupied last year and this, but occupies a fine hill and is surrounded by sixty-eight acres of wooded lands and gardens. Mr. Taft decided some time ago to make Magnolia the Summer capital, but negotiations there fell through.

A cottage for use as executive offices has been leased just across the street from the Peabody place.

John Hays Hammond accompanied the President so far as Baltimore, but will proceed at his ease to his home in Gloucester, Mass., to-day.

One thing very attractive at this cottage in the Summer months and which has been noticed by hundreds of people are the Japanese gardens. There is a large tennis court, and about the grounds can be seen every variety of a tree, of which many were secured by Mr. and Mr. Peabody when he was in Japan.

The grounds contain about sixty acres and it is considered one of the finest estates on the North Shore, equalling that of Mrs. R. D. Evans at Burgess Point.

The new home of the President is but a short ride from the Myopia Hunt Club, off links at Hamilton, where the President during the past summer spent a greater part of his time playing golf on the Myopia links.

It is thought doubtful if the President will use the links on the Peabody estate a great deal, as the Myopia links are considered the finest in the country and, as the President is fast becoming a professional at his game, the best links in the country are considered none too good for him.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

A landslide would make the leaders hesitate about their ball supplies, for the financial world is not anxious to have any party in absolute power for the next two years. Small industries and mixed results are what the Street wants.

$ $ $

Traders who believe the market will advance after election closed out their accounts, thus varying to some extent the surprise. The important interests which have been under the control for a few weeks were the only purchasers, and the fact that the market remained so firm as if this support had been withdrawn shows these interests are prepared for any outcome to-day.

$ $ $

Opinion of bankers who try to keep in close touch with stock exchanges was that if Dix should be elected in New York the market would open up to-morrow, reel sharply on profit-taking and then resume the movement, while if Stimson should be elected it will open dull and weak with an advance almost immediately. They say the market is so ships in ignorance as to spills unless something absolutely unexpected and sudden happens. For instance, a tremendous landslide in favor of one party.

$ $ $

The mere passing of the election will be of great importance to the security market, because it will make it possible for President Taft to announce several important policies which have been developed in the last three months. With his usual sense of fair play, the President has refused to permit the Cabinet policies to be stated officially for fear that some one hand, they may be seized by politicians in an effort to influence the election, and, on the other hand, they be interpreted by the public as promises.

$ $ $

From the Copper Producers' report it appears that the miners have succeeded to such a state of production that the output will continue to gain. Conditions reasonably justify the copper metal and must result in a continued growth of consumption. It is encouraging to the activity of the smelting industry, for the vast tonnage of the porphyry ores will soon be rushing to the melting pots. One has but to look a little further and you are the American Smelting and Refining Company running now and to build new blood smelters, for no matter what the price per pound per metal may be, it has to be smelted, and the cheaper it is the more of it there will be consumed. It is possible that the bond issue planned by the Smelters Securities Company to refund that behind their present strength of American Smelting stock.

$ $ $

Foreign exchange is heavy again, not because finance bills are being sold, but because finance export of cotton is nearly $30,000,000 of exchange weekly. Although the movement of cotton this slight this year is 450,000 bales behind what it was a year ago, exports are nearly 100,000 bales under last year's record. Unless the figures are hiding a sensational amount of cotton, hiding about 700,000 bales, this year's crop is another short one, and the foreign buyer continue to advance sharply, thus furnishing a growing volume of sterling bills. The cotton crop is affecting the money market, and the bankers who understand it thoroughly look for present fear of money trouble, but they do not look for any soon. Western banks continue to borrow money.

$ $ $

Union Pacific is one stock which inside seem perfectly willing to buy regardless of the election. Most of the activity in the litigation with the Government over the merger dispute, the export of which is denied. Steel insiders are equally confident, and are not going to become bearish on the filled orders on October 31 stood at the record. The bullish view is that the figures a week ago and since then Steel has made a new high record. Meanwhile officers of the Steel Trust say that tariff reform could not hurt them.

$ $ $

Louisville & Nashville and Southern Railway are very strong, on election of interests to control railroad rates, giving reasonableness of rates on grain, grain products, and cotton between points in Ohio and Mississippi crossings to points in the Southern States. This is generally regarded as a matter of very great importance in the present state of business involved. It is considered significant of the attitude of the commission towards rate matters.

$ $ $

American Agricultural Chemical and Virginia Carolina Chemical sold down sharply because a company has imported an export duty of $4 per hundred pounds on potash. All the chemical companies use potash, and this duty will increase materially their cost of production.

How Long Will It Be Before This Newspaper Will Be Holding an Aeroplane Reliability Flight?

May Such a Thing Be Expected in a Dozen or So Years? A Lesson from the Successful Motor Truck Run to Newburyport Conducted Under the Auspices of the American Flying is great as a sport, fascinating as an exhibition and its use in war is forecasted by every military authority.

The question is raised, pretty nearly every time two men discuss aviation, whether the navigation of the air is going to be of any practical use in the peaceful workaday world.

Solemn men, with the conservative's unconscious resistance to change of any kind, assure us that the airship will never be anything beyond the toy of daredevil rich young men, who have exhausted every other method of getting a thrill out of life, and part of the sideshows of county fairs—like its clumsy predecessor, the balloon.

These men will point out exhaustively that the irreducible percentage of danger the reluctance of the ordinary man and woman to trust themselves off the surface of the earth, the necessity for technical skill and of physical perfection and perfect nerves will forbid forever flying becoming a common means of getting about or of transporting freight.

Thirty-seven motor trucks ran to Newburyport and back in the American's contest, carrying loads up to five tons.

They demonstrated that the new cartage system could handle three times the amount of merchandise that horse-drawn vehicles could take care of—and do it at less expense and in vastly quicker time.

Fifteen years ago there was not such a thing in the world as a motor truck.

There were a few automobiles, mainly in the possession of professionals, who used them to give exhibitions.

It was exhaustively pointed out that great technical skill was required to operate a vehicle driven by an engine, and that the necessity of extreme care in materials and construction would forever keep the automobile in the class of things to be enjoyed only by reckless millionaires and showmen of the same type who keep on hand $5,000 boa constrictors, $8,000 rhinoceroses and $10,000 giraffes—because people will pay to see them.

And the other day thirty-seven prosaic vehicles, each with its load of tons, rolled along the road to Newburyport, just as they roll every day through the streets of every city in the land, delivering goods to thousands, carrying freight from depots to warerooms, each with a plain workaday driver at the wheel—and not a suggestion of a speed-mad joy rider, or a hippodroming showman about the whole useful procession.

Fifteen years ago this parade of the burden bearers was as unthinkable as the idea that the day will come when your groceries and coal will be delivered by aeroplane is to-day.

The show phase, the luxury phase, are both stages in the progress of an invention, like teething in a baby.

The curiosity of to-day is the commonplace of to-morrow; the luxury of to-morrow is the popular convenience of next week.

It may be more than fifteen years before the American offers a series of cups for the various classes of aeroplane trucks in a reliability flight from here to Newburyport and back—the classes being graded according to speed, economy of fuel and carrying capacity—but there is no logical reason why such a contest should not come to pass.

Boston and San Francisco's Exposition

Boston and New England merchants are waking up to the advantages which this city and section may gain from the proposed Panama Canal Exposition in San Francisco in 1915, and the sentiment is growing that if the great fair, which will celebrate the completion of the canal, is located at the Golden Gate it will be of much more advantage to the commercial interests of this part of the country than if the site selected for it is anywhere else.

The advantages to Boston and New England in having the exposition in San Francisco are many, but chief among them is the fact that if the Fair is located on the Pacific Coast it will give this city and neighborhood a better chance to display its manufactures for Oriental inspection. The Fair, if held at San Francisco, will be visited by a multitude of merchants, financiers and other prominent men from China, Manchuria, Korea, Japan, Australia and the west coast of South America. They will look over everything made in this country which is exhibited there with a view to introducing new lines of goods in their respective countries. The market they represent is second to none in the world in extent and area and extent of consumption, and all the manufacturing nations of the world are striving to gain control of it. The exposition if held in San Francisco, will do more to extend the demand for American manufactures in South America, the Pacific islands and the Orient than all the battleships the United States government can build and send to the Far East. Orientals will swarm to San Francisco to view the Fair because that city is the most famous of all Pacific ports, and is one of the gateways of trade on the ocean for whose commercial mastery the greatest rivalry exists. The Orientals would not think of going to an exposition at any interior city with whom they have few trade connections and about which they have heard little or care less. But every Oriental, every South American and every Australian knows all about San Francisco. In their eyes it is the most important city in all America.

Boston and New England ought to be represented at the Panama Exposition in San Francisco by the finest display of the goods made in the manufacturing cities and towns of this region which can be gotten together. Outside of its tremendous cotton and woolen industries, its boots and shoes and its print goods products, New England is the greatest place in this hemisphere for making mechanical specialties. It has the finest inventive genius and the highest skilled workmen in the world. It makes a countless number of tools and appliances which may be sold in the Orient and the other parts of the world which will send its traders to San Francisco to learn what the United States is making for sale at home and abroad.

It is up to Yankee ingenuity to make a display there which will create a demand for all its manufactures and wares in the teeming markets of Asia. It is estimated that the population of China alone is between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000. That country is fast adopting Occidental civilization as Japan has done. The demand for goods which are made in New England can be fostered until the trade of Boston with the Orient will be multiplied many times, as well as that of every other city in the section for which it always has been the metropolis.

If Boston and New England helps to locate the Exposition in San Francisco both of the former will be benefitted. The opening of the Panama Canal will help Boston's maritime trade immensely, but this city will gain still more by lending a hand to the San Fransicso Fair and making a showing there worthy of the great event and of the capital of old New England.

It seems strange, now that the doctrine of evolution is so generally accepted, that there has not developed along with it a more humanitive interest in orders of animal life inferior to the human. If the Darwinian theory is adopted to its fullness, then we are connected with the other members of the animal kingdom by ties of kinship.

That kinship may be remote, but the remoteness would not repeat the fact of kinship. So that our relation to them is of a unique kind; and the sense of that unique relation ought to induce in us a peculiar condition of mind and sentiment in our contemplation of them, and especially in our immediate observation of such animals as most unmistakably resemble the human, and particularly in those creatures where instinct is breaking out into intelligence and where there are evidenced the rude beginnings of speech.

Wherever there is intelligence, however slight, it will attempt to express itself. As Professor Garner, who has devoted some twenty years to the study of linguistics among the monkey and chimpanzee tribe, remarked in a before recently given in this city, "thought tries to utter itself, and the means by which it does so is language."

The term language is therefore justly applicable to any attempt which an animal makes to give expression to an inner state of mind or feeling, no matter how incomprehensible the sounds which it makes in its attempted utterances or how widely they may differ from the sounds made by the human voice.

A Chimpanzee Who Thinks and Uses a Speech of Its Own

Brute language is, therefore, as much a fact as human language, and as worthy of scientific investigation; and it betrays a curious lack of the scientific impulse and a singular indifference to the condition and character of our poorer and humbler relations, that so much flippant sarcasm should have been flung at a man like Professor Garner, who has expended so many years and so much devoted thought to the little anthropoid men and women who are the inhabitants of the African bush.

The story which Professor Garner gives of his African experiences is not only fascinatingly interesting as a narrative, but is certain to leave in the mind of a teachable auditor two convictions—one, that upon close observation the chimpanzee gives unmistakable evidence of thought, understanding by thought exactly the same thing that we do when speaking of man; the other, that there is in the chimpanzee not only a variety of thoughts and emotions, but that each of these has its appropriate vocal symbol which in time becomes intelligible to a student who has interestedly lived with chimpanzees in appreciative social relations.

It is impossible to know either people or chimpanzee till we have lived with them. The little lady, only nine months old whom the professor employed to illustrate the principles stated in his lecture, had just been awakened from a long sleep, and, like other children when their parents desire should appear to best possible advantage on public occasions, was not disposed to put her best foot forward, or rather, her best paw. She was loco inclined to be petted and to put her arms around the neck of her master (or rather, "father," as he likes to call himself), than to sustain by her own manifest brilliancy the assertions made by the lecturer.

Apparent Friction in Work of the Ape Brain

It was with especial pleasure, therefore, that I accepted an invitation to a private séance with "Susie" where she would be relieved of the embarrassment of drowsiness and the restraints of publicity. And she certainly showed herself to be a very bright little girl—in most respects, the equivalent of average children of three times her age.

In the first place, she did as she was told, which cannot be said of many children. The promptness of her obedience spoke well for her morals and for the wise discipline of the Professor.

She demonstrated triumphantly her ability to discriminate between colors and between different varieties of fruit. And the most suggestive feature of that demonstration was not that she instantly selected the color or fruit that was asked of her, but that her selection was attended by ten or fifteen seconds of deliberation.

One, in intently and affectionately observing her, would instinctively realize that the machinery of her little chimpanzee mind was running, but with so much friction that results were reached only by an effort that had in it a touch of pain.

It was impossible not to love the little thing, or to decline its mute request, when it touched my hand and drew it to her neck with the desire that I should caress it. The Professor loves his pet and it is by virtue of his affectionate understanding of her and of other members of her tribe that he has been able to advance so far in his understanding of them and his control over them.
